PREFACE

I take this opportunity to express my obligation to all my teachers at Dartmouth and Princeton. Especial thanks are due to Prof. Frank Frost Abbott, whose assistance and encouragement have been generously given to me during the preparation of this dissertation. I am indebted also to Prof. Duane Reed Stuart for many helpful suggestions.

INTRODUCTION

The present study of the Cognomina of Roman legionaries is an attempt to collect and to classify the cognomina of men enrolled in the legions in the time of the Empire. The cognomina of soldiers, veterans, and under-officers, up to and including primi pili, who served in the legions only are considered. These men have as a common bond Roman citizenship and may properly be brought together for a study of this kind.

Cognomina which occur with any frequency are assembled in the first chapter. A brief summary of the evidence supporting the name is given, together with the data showing its distribution among the provinces, its chronological development, and the homes of the men who bear the name.

The second chapter contains a detailed classification of all the cognomina, arranged alphabetically under several headings, e. g., according to form, endings, or derivation. The table of divisions indicated at the beginning of the chapter will explain further the classification.

The third chapter is devoted to a brief discussion of some problems which grow out of the investigation of the cognomina. Altogether about 5700 names are published in the alphabetical list which is placed at the end of this study. This list is arranged primarily to meet the needs of this investigation, but it is hoped that the material in it will prove useful to those who may wish to study the legionaries for some other reason.

The desirability of making a study of the cognomina of soldiers was suggested by a statement of Eugen Bormann (Der roemische Limes in Oesterreich, Heft IV, 1903, p. 132). In this passage an inscription found at Carnuntum and containing the names of two soldiers is under discussion. At the conclusion of the comment on the names of these men it is said, "die beiden anderen haben die gleichartigen Cognomina, Firmus und Severus, erhalten, vielleicht, da es für Soldaten passende sind, (Fest, Streng) als sie zum Soldatendienst bestimmt waren." Furthermore no exhaustive collection of cognomina in Roman names has as yet been made, although such a work would prove a valuable contribution to classical study. Schulze, Lat. Eigennamen p. 497, observes, "Eine mit allen Künsten und Mitteln der Epigraphik vorgehende Untersuchung, die auch für die Interessen des Grammatikers dringend erwünscht wäre," etc.

That enrollment in a legion presupposed Roman citizenship is a fact too well-known to need a repeated demonstration. And further, toward the end of the first century, when the legions began to be recruited outside of Italy, it seems beyond question that many men were becoming legionaries who had not been Roman citizens for a very long period before their enlistment. Note the formation of the legions I and II Adiutrices from the fleet in the year 68. This admission into citizenship was probably accompanied by a change of name. (Inscriptions of the II Adiutrix in England during the next two decades, 71-85, may be searched in vain for any men who appear to be non-Romans. Practically all the men named in these inscriptions indicate their tribe and father's name, usually considered definite testimony to Roman citizenship, vid. Mommsen's comment on an inscription cited below. A soldier born at Lugudunum has the Celtic cognomen Salica, Eph. Epigr. IX p. 557).

Some information, meager but precise, about the change of name which took place when a man entered the Roman army or the fleet has come down to us. Unfortunately the references in this ancient testimony do not concern legionaries, but, inasmuch as Roman citizenship was a sine qua non for service in this part of the army and since the recruiting was going on in all sections of the Empire, there is every reason for believing that the practice of name-changing here mentioned took place in the case of the soldiers of the legions as well as in that of men in other bodies of troops.

A description of the evidence upon which this conclusion depends may be properly brought in here, although it has already received considerable attention in the discussions cited below. A letter written to his father by a lad who had just joined the fleet has been found in Egypt on a papyrus of the first half of the second century. (Berliner griechische Urkunden 423, Deissmann, Licht vom Osten, 1909, pp. 120ff, Milligan, Greek Papyri, pp. 90-92, Cambridge, 1910.) The young man, Apion, from Philadelphia in Egypt, writes to his father, Epimachos, that he has reached his station at Misenum safely after a stormy voyage. He rejoices over three gold pieces paid to him at the outset of his new duties and adds this sentence important for our purpose, ἔστι δέ μου Ἀντώνις Μάξιμος. In a letter written some years later to his sister Sabina this "soldier" calls himself only by his new name, Antonius Maximus. In this second communication he mentions his son Maximus and nephew Maximus. (Deissmann, op. cit. p. 125f, Lambertz, Glotta, V, 1913, p. 108.) In several other instances men who entered the fleet have recorded their native and adopted names on stones (Mommsen, Hermes, 16, 1881, p. 466, Lambertz, Glotta, IV, p. 130f). From another papyrus (Pap. Cattaoui 3) we learn of an ἀστός Εἰσεδωρος who has enrolled in the σπείρη πρώτη Θηβαίων under the name Ἰούλιος Μαρτιανός. A third instance of this kind is afforded by still another papyrus from the Fayoum, now in the Berlin collection (B. G. U. 888). This document is dated in the years 159-160 and reads as follows: Γάιος Ἰούλιος Ἀπολινάριος στρατιώτης σπ(ειρης πρώτης)ης Ἀπαυγῆνον . . . ως δὲ πρότης στρατεῖας κεχρημάτ(ικε Νέων) τοῦ Μύστου. (The restoration of this last name is adopted from Lambertz, op. cit., V, p. 153.) The new names chosen in place of the old are in these cases Maximus, Martianus, and Apollinaris. In the instances of the men in the fleet that are referred to above, the newly acquired cognomina are Celer, Silvanus, Albanus, Paulus, Valens, and Victor. Many parallels to these names, which may be regarded as "typical," may be found among the names of the legionaries in this collection. If then we feel sure that the greater part of the names of soldiers in the legions were taken by them at the time of their enlistment, that is, about the age of twenty (vid. Cagnat, "legio," Daremberg-Saglio) the examination of these cognomina may not prove an unprofitable exercise.

It is possible, however, to derive some information concerning the names of legionaries from the inscriptions now existing. Mommsen has made a very significant observation in commenting on a list of soldiers found on a stone in Egypt. This inscription (CIL III 6627 = Eph. Epigr. V, p. 5-17) is dated by the editor as early as the reign of Augustus. In regard to the soldiers' names and particularly concerning those of men belonging to the tribe Pollia, Mommsen remarks, "Cives hos civitate Romana donatos patrem cire omnes tantum abest, ut offendat, ut adeo coniecturam confirmet; nam, ut bene monuit Huelsenus noster, nullus eorum patrem habet praenomine diverso, id quod praesertim in titulo eius aetatis qua praenominum usus adhuc plene vigebat, indicat patres ex bona parte ficticos esse et una cum tribu et civitate adsumptos." None of the soldiers whose names are recorded on this stone bears a cognomen. It is important for our purpose, however, to note that the name was subjected to certain changes. Later, when cognomina were in use, it is not unreasonable to suppose that this part of the name una cum tribu et civitate was assumed. The conclusion of Schulze, Lat. Eigennamen, p. 496, points in this direction: "Die Fremden, die erst durch die Einreihung in die Legion das Bürgerrecht und der roemischen Namen empfingen, haben also aus diesen Anlass ihren alten Individualnamen, wenigstens für die amtliche Sprache, ablegen müssen." The words of Lambertz, Glotta, V, p. 108, apply only to a particular part of the army, but this may not be an overstatement for the majority of the legionaries. The passage referred to reads, "dass... der Eintritt ins römische Heer für den Aegypter ein Grund war, einen seiner neuen Umgebung angepaszten Namen anzunehmen."

The same conclusion has been reached by Rudolf Herzog (Namensübersetzungen und Verwandtes, Philologus, LXI, 1897, pp. 33-70), "Wer römisches Gewand annahm, römische Bürger wurde, muszte sich dazu bequemen, den Vornamen und Namen einer bestehenden römischen gens anzunehmen, die durch äussere Verhältnisse für ihn bestimmt wurde. Seine Nationalität konnte er nur durch eine Hinterthür, das cognomen, das keine integrierenden Bestandtheil des Namens bildete, herein-schmuggeln, wenn er wollte. Wollte er sie verleugnen, konnte er allerdings durch die drei von uns aufgestellten Namensänderungen auch sein Cognomen latinisieren."

Since new names were chosen by the legionary recruits, it is a proper question to ask what these names were. It is idle to speculate on the fitness of names or the reason for selecting this or that one until some investigation is made of the available evidence regarding the names. The two parts of the Roman name where any large measure of variety was possible were the nomen and cognomen. The history of the nomen has been treated exhaustively by Wilhelm Schulze, Zur Geschichte lateinscher Eigennamen, and the frequency with which the nomen of an Emperor is employed by soldiers has already been observed by Mommsen (Hermes, 19, 1884, p. 3) “....etwa seit Marcus, da von da an die Kaisergentilicien bei den Legionaren in auffallender Häufigkeit sich einstellen.” Cf. A. von Premerstein, Klio, III, 1903, p. 4, and Cagnat, L'Armée Romaine, 2nd. ed. p. 293, vid. Chap. III. below. The cognomen is the most variable part of the name and the present classification throws some light on its use in an important unit of society under the Empire.

Beyond the application to an individual of a nomen and cognomen a further step in the development of the name is the practice of using nicknames. At first sight it would seem natural to investigate nicknames, if one wished to ascertain whether the soldiers possessed some appellation peculiarly suited to men in the military calling. And, indeed, such a study would be entered upon with great eagerness were material abundant enough to warrant it. That there were nicknames among the soldiers one can hardly deny, but on account of their ephemeral nature they have almost entirely perished. To speak of a name of this kind reminds one at once of the famous Fabius Cunctator, but other examples are few. Names of this nature which are known in literature are collected by Kampf, Romanorum sermonis castrensis reliquiae collectae et illustratae, Jarhb. f. klass. Phil. Suppl. XXVI, pp. 340-400.

The existence of the supernomina and cases of its occurrence have been excellently discussed by Lambertz in an article referred to above. (Zur Ausbreitung des Supernomina oder Signum im roemischen Reiche, Glotta, 1913, IV, pp. 78-143, and V, pp. 99-169) Amid the material which is collected in these two articles the names of legionaries which show double cognomina are few. In the absence of any index to the work of Lambertz and for convenient reference these cases are assembled on another page, vid. Chap. III, Double Cognomina.

We can scarcely hope then for many humorous side-lights on camp life from the nicknames which were applied by the soldiers to each other. Such names as Cicatricula, Lugudunolus, or Sterceius may actually have been bestowed in jest, but one must resist the temptation to theorize on the appropriateness of many names because of the slender supply of information which has been preserved. And, while a large number of names may have been chosen or applied with full understanding of what the word meant, it would be folly to maintain the literalness of Rufus or the probable fitness of Maximus in every instance. The object of this study is simply to ascertain what the facts are in regard to the use of cognomina among Roman citizens, below the equestrian rank in this particular walk of life.

The evidence which has been considered here comes to us wholly on stones and on papyri. The limits placed have been the rank of the person and the indication of some legion. Men who are not assigned to any legion but are certainly members of one have been included as far as possible. Care has been taken to make the alphabetical list of cognomina given at the end as complete as the material which has been published thus far will permit. It must be admitted, however, that omissions may be detected, and the constant appearance of new material prevents a work of this kind from being actually complete.

CHAPTER ONE

POPULAR COGNOMINA

FOREWORD

Chapter One is composed of brief paragraphs which summarize the evidence concerning those cognomina found most frequently in the names of legionary soldiers. The number twenty has been adopted as a standard for admission to this list of "popular" cognomina. Such cognomina as are represented by twenty or more examples are here discussed. These are:

Alexander	Festus	Marcianus	Saturninus
Antoninus	Firmus	Martialis	Secundus
Bassus	Fortunatus	Maximus	Severus
Candidus	Fronto	Niger	Silvanus
Castus	Fuscus	Optatus	Tertius
Celer	Germanus	Primus	Urbanus
Clemens	Honoratus	Priscus	Valens
Crescens	Ianuarius	Proculus	Valentinus
Crispus	Ingenuus	Pudens	Valerianus
Datus	Iulianus	Rogatianus	Verecundus
Donatus	Iustus	Rogatus	Verus
Emeritus	Longinus	Rufinus	Victor
Faustus	Marcellinus	Rufus	Victorinus
Felix	Marcellus	Sabinus	Vitalis

Attention is called particularly to the geographical distribution and chronological development of the use of the cognomina. Any cognate forms of names in the list given above are also mentioned, if these occur in the names of soldiers. In many cases the home of the soldier who has a given cognomen will be far removed from the place where the stone itself was found. The majority of such cases as these can be assigned to the first or early part of the second century. The inscriptional evidence is divided according to the provinces in which the stones were found. The general distribution of the evidence showing the use of cognomina in the legions is as follows: From the province of Africa slightly over one-third of the whole number of names has been taken; from provinces the inscriptions of which are published in CIL, vol. III, about one-third; and from other parts of the Roman Empire, the remainder, something less than one-third. In discussing "popular" cognomina, then, it will be necessary to bear in mind this proportional division of the inscriptions, and contrast the frequency of names from Lambaesis, which was the camp of the III Augusta in Africa for a long period, with that of the names found in the Danube provinces. The table added at the end of the chapter indicates in convenient form the distribution of the several cognomina here mentioned. Constant reference to the alphabetical list at the back will be found helpful and necessary for a full understanding of these brief statements.

The date of an inscription is always important but not always easy to determine. For the majority of the cognomina in this chapter, a number of the examples sufficient to indicate the general chronological development can be dated. A knowledge of the movements of the legions in the several provinces is very helpful in dating these inscriptions. This, however, must be used with great care, because not all the detailed movements of legionary detachments are known beyond question.

In this chapter when a name is noted as found in Pannonia or Germany the legion to which the bearer of this name belongs is not always given. To state the legion in such instances does not seem an essential factor in the study of the cognomina. This relative unimportance of the name of the legion in which a man is enrolled is due to the scantiness of the material available for present examination. Had we as many names of the members of every legion as of those who served in the III Augusta at Lambaesis, it is very probable that more cognomina which enjoyed popularity in particular legions or provinces could be discovered.

If we turn to the consideration of the nature of the cognomina which appear in this chapter our attention is drawn to the large number of them which are adjectives in origin. In anticipation of the classification of Chapter II, these popular cognomina may be grouped in the following manner: Adjectives denoting qualities suited to men in military service are Celer, Faustus, Felix, Festus, Firmus, Fortunatus, Martialis, Severus, Valens, and Victor. Adjectives with reference to physical characteristics are Candidus, Crispus, Fuscus, Niger, Rufus, and Vitalis. Adjectives containing a reference to mental or moral characteristics are Castus, Clemens, Iustus, Pudens, Verecundus, and Verus. Germanus and Sabinus possess some geographical or racial significance. Silvanus and Urbanus originally had a local coloring. Primus, Secundus, and Tertius are numeral adjectives. Ianuarius and Saturninus, perhaps also Martialis, are connected with names of deities and may in addition relate to birthdays. Participial adjectives are frequent in African names, vid. Chap. III, The Cognomina of African Legionaries. In this chapter one finds Crescens, Datus, Donatus, Emeritus, Honoratus, Optatus, and Rogatus. Ingenuus, Priscus, and Maximus are the remaining adjectives in this chapter. It will be noted that adjectives form almost three-fourths of the popular cognomina. The following end in -ianus: Iulianus, Marciianus, Rogatianus, and Valerianus. Those ending in -inus are Antoninus, Longinus, Marcellinus, Rufinus, Sabinus, Saturninus, Valentinus, and Victorinus. Bassus, Fronto, and Proculus are well-known Roman names. The same may be said of Marcellus, which is in form, however, a diminutive. Antoninus is connected with an Emperor's name. Alexander is the only cognomen not of Roman origin.

ALEXANDER

This cognomen, which is the first, alphabetically, to be found with any frequency, and the only name of Greek origin in this chapter, is represented by forty-eight examples in the list given below. Alexander and Alexandrus have been found once each. These fifty instances are distributed among the provinces of the Roman Empire as follows: Thirty-one examples have been found in the scattered territory the inscriptions of which are published in CIL III; from Lambaesis and its camp in Africa eleven examples have been collected; at Mainz four cases were found; at Rome three; and in England one. The earliest instance of the use of Alexander as a soldier's cognomen appears on a papyrus from Egypt. The soldier, whose name is Ulpius Alexander, is enrolled in the III Cyrenaica legion which was stationed in Egypt before the year 108. (For the use of the nomen Ulpius in this period, vid. Chap. III, Imperial Nomina.) Two other examples of Alexander have been found in Egypt, both belonging to the second century. The cognomen Alexander was in use in the Danube provinces throughout the second and early part of the third century. At Lambaesis the earliest case of Alexander is in the name of a petty officer in service in the reign of Antoninus Pius. The other dated examples at this camp belong to the first decades of the third century. At Mainz the cognomen Alexander is found in the name of a centurion, Valerius Alexander, serving in the XXII Primigenia, twice on a stone cut in the year 204 and again in the year following. The centurion of the year 205 is probably the same as one of those of the previous year. The legionaries at Rome who bear this cognomen belong to the late second or third century.

Alexandrus, due to Greek influence, is found in the name of a signifer serving in Egypt later than the year 214, who adds natione Macedon.

The nomina used with Alexander are to be noticed because they appear over and over again with the various cognomina in this collection. Some of these are Aurelius (in nine names), Claudius (two), Domitius (three), Flavius (two), Iulius (nine), Septimius (two), Valerius (five), Ulpius (three). All except Valerius are imperial nomina and may often assist in determining the approximate date of inscriptions. (Mommsen, Hermes XIX, p. 3, and Chap. III, Imperial Nomina.)

ANTONINUS

Antoninus has been found as a cognomen among the legionaries in twenty names. These are distributed in the following provinces: In the territory the inscriptions of which are published in CIL III ten examples have been noted. Nine instances are listed from Africa, and one is found in Italy.

The last mentioned is perhaps the first in point of time. The person who bears the name Flavius Antoninus was a primus pilus of the I Adiutrix promoted from service in the fleet, and may belong to the close of the first century. Claudius Antoninus enrolled as a soldier in the III Cyrenaica in Egypt cannot be later than the year 108. In the Danube provinces Antoninus is noted first in the year 134. Other examples range in date through nearly a century following this. One instance of the name M. Aurelius Antoninus to designate a soldier appears on a stone in Dacia. This inscription is certainly later than the reign of Trajan and probably is later than the principate of Marcus Aurelius. Among the number from Lambaesis a centurion bears the name M. Aurelius Antoninus. This man, like the one just mentioned, may reasonably be assigned to the latter part of the second century. The earliest example of Antoninus at the African camp belongs to a veteran (?) who was born in camp, serving during the reign of Hadrian. The other dated instances fall in the interval between the years 198 and 253.

The cognomen Antonianus is found twice in the inscriptions from Lambaesis. One instance belongs to the reign of Gallienus (253–268); the other is not dated. Antonianus is the cognomen of a centurion in England; the inscription is later than the reign of Hadrian.

Antonius is found as the cognomen of a soldier in Moesia in the year 155.

BASSUS

Forty-two examples of the cognomen Bassus have been collected. Cognomina related to Bassus are Bassinus and Bassianus, each represented by one inscription. Basus is probably a variant spelling. Bassilas seems to be connected with Bassus. The origin and meaning of the name Bassus is a problem with which the present study is not concerned.

The geographical distribution of the inscriptions containing the names of legionaries who bear the cognomen Bassus is as follows: The provinces covered by CIL III furnish sixteen; Africa yields fourteen; Italy contributes six; Germany, four; and England, two.

The earliest instances belong to the period before the reign of Claudius. These are C. Apidius Bassus, whose home is Amiternum, serving in the XIth legion as primus pilus; Q. Marcius Bassus, whose home is Beneventum, serving in the VIIth legion in Dalmatia; and L. Refidius Bassus, whose home is Venafrum, serving as centurion in the XVIth legion at Mainz. Several men with this cognomen were enrolled during the latter part of the first century. One was stationed in Germany; three have been recorded on stones and a papyrus from Egypt. Of these, one, a miles, of the year 80 indicates Damascus as his home. Two others of the years 90 and 94 were born in camp. Still another first century instance of Bassus is noted as the cognomen of a veteran whose home is Pisaurum, of the VII Claudia in Dalmatia.

Bassus is found as the cognomen of legionaries in the Danube region in inscriptions of the second and third centuries. Two examples belonging to the second century have been found in Egypt. The series of legionary inscriptions from Africa which contain this cognomen begins with the names of two veterans (?), whose native town is Apamea, in service during the reign of Hadrian. Other examples extend well into the third century. Hadrumetum and the camp are the birth-places of two men who bear the cognomen Bassus. All the variant forms relating to Bassus have been found in inscriptions from Africa.

CANDIDUS

There are twenty-three examples of the cognomen Candidus in the present list. Candidinus and Candidianus are cognomina related to Candidus which appear among the names of soldiers. The geographical distribution of the inscriptions which furnish Candidus as a cognomen of men who belong to the legions is as follows: From the provinces embraced by CIL III come twelve of the number; from Africa five have been taken; from England and Germany, two each.

The earliest legionary, as far as we know, to bear this cognomen is a member of the IIII Macedonica. Consequently this man was enrolled before the reign of Vespasian. A centurion at Theveste in Numidia has been assigned to the second half of the first century. If this date is correct, we have in addition to an early use of Candidus an early employment of the nomen Aurelius. (For Aurelius, vid. Chap. III, Imperial Nomina.) All the other dated examples of the cognomen Candidus are later than the first century. Theveste is given as the home of a centurion with this cognomen at Lambaesis about the year 215. Examples of Candidinus and Candidianus are also later than the first century.

CASTUS

Twenty-three instances of Castus as a cognomen of legionaries have been found. The related form Castinus appears on one stone recording the name of a soldier. The examples of Castus are divided among the provinces as follows: From the territory covered by CIL III, four; from Africa, fifteen; from Germany, two; from England and Gallia Narbonensis, one each.

By far the earliest of this group and, in fact, one of the very early instances of the use of a cognomen among the legionaries is that found in Egypt on a stone dated by Mommsen in the reign of Augustus (CIL III 6627). A centurion mentioned on this stone has the cognomen Castus. Other cognomina from this inscription are noted later, and these are collected in Chapter III under "The Earliest Cognomina.") No other first century use of Castus has been noted. In Africa Castus appears first in a list of centurions of the year 162. Other examples extend the use of Castus into the third century. The homes of men who possess this cognomen are indicated in some inscriptions. Two were born in camp. Theveste and Cirta are also mentioned. The Danube provinces yield three examples of Castus. One can be dated in the year 195, belonging to a veteran whose home is Ratiaria in Moesia.

CELER

Celer has been found as the cognomen of thirty-eight legionaries. Cognomina related to Celer are Celerinus, Celerianus, and Celeris. Celeris, though clearly the reading of the stone, is perhaps an error on the part of the engraver. The examples of Celer as a cognomen are distributed among the provinces as follows: From the territories covered epigraphically by CIL III twenty-four have been taken; from Africa (Lambaesis), five; from England and Spain, three each; from Italy, two; and from Gallia Narbonensis, one.

The earliest use of Celer by a legionary is in the name of a man enrolled in the VI Ferrata at Beneventum probably not long after 31 B. C. This is the only inscription of a group found at Beneventum to preserve a name with a cognomen and to add the name Ferrata to the number of the legion. Eleven names with the cognomen Celer can be dated in the first century, an unusually large proportion of the whole number of examples. Two of these have been found in Dalmatia. One belongs to a centurion whose home is Verona. Two others were preserved at Carnuntum. One soldier with this cognomen indicates Ara (Agrippinensium) as his home. Celer is the cognomen of a soldier and of a veteran enrolled in the II Adiutrix and found in inscriptions in England and Spain respectively. The home of the soldier is Aprum and that of the veteran is Brixia. A soldier of the IIII Macedonia with the cognomen Celer adds ex Ispania after his name. The four remaining of this first century group are the names of legionaries in Egypt toward the close of the century. One of these men was born in camp. Possibly of the first century are men named Celer from Cremona, Florentia, and Ticinum, serving in Pannonia. Pessununtum and Clunia are indicated as the homes of men bearing this cognomen in service in Rome and Spain respectively.

Celer continues to be used as a cognomen in the Danube region throughout the second and into the third century. At Lambaesis the earliest use of Celer belongs to the reign of Hadrian. In this instance the veteran (?) who bears the cognomen indicates Nicomedia as his home. Three other examples of Celer belong to the third century. The last instance, undated, of Celer is as the cognomen of a man born in camp. Carthage is given as the home of Ravillius Celer, a veteran at Alexandria in the year 194.

Celerinus is found as a cognomen twice during the first century. Six other examples belong to a later period. Four are certainly dated in the third century. Six instances were found in the Danube provinces; two were recovered in Germany together with Celerianus. It will be noted that during the third century the cognomen Celer occurs more frequently in Africa than in the Danube region, where Celerinus appears to have gained in popularity.

CLEMENS

This cognomen appears both as Clemens and Clemes. The examples of Clemens and Clemes number thirty-eight. The form Clementinus is found in three names. The distribution of the uses of Clemens is as follows: The provinces covered by CIL III furnish nineteen cases; Africa yields seven; Germany, six; England, four; and Italy, two.

The earliest instance of the use of Clemens is as the cognomen of a centurion in Egypt in the reign of Augustus. (Vid. Castus above and Chap. III, The Earliest Cognomina.) Two centurions in England toward the close of the first century have the cognomen Clemens. Another centurion in Belgica belongs to this same period, and two soldiers in Germany were in service about this time. One gives as his home Aequm. It is not improbable that Aulus Baebius Clemens, whose home is Faesula, a soldier at Mainz, may belong to this early period. A group of four men with the cognomen Clemens or Clemes are noted on papyri from Egypt. One belongs to the year 90, the others are earlier than the year 108.

The cognomen Clemens continued in use throughout the second century in the Danube provinces. Third century examples are lacking. Clementinus, however, appears in Pannonia in the year 228.

Five of the instances of Clemens from Africa, i. e. Lambaesis, are before the year 200. The other two are not certainly dated. Gabala and Napoca are the homes of two men who bear the name Clemens and a third was born in camp. C. Sulpicius Clementinus in service at this camp gives Sicca as his home. (Note: Caecilius Clemens found on two stones in England appears twice in the present list. Without doubt both names refer to the same person.)

CRESCENS

Like Clemens, the cognomen Crescens appears also as Cresces on several stones and these have been separated in the alphabetical list. Crescens has been found in fifty names and Cresces is represented by six examples. The related forms of Crescentinus and Crescentianus are also preserved. The distribution of the fifty-six instances of the use of Crescens and Cresces among the provinces is as follows: The territory the inscriptions from which are published in CIL III yields eleven; Africa contributes thirty-two; Germany, seven; Italy and England, three each. The four examples of Crescentianus are all from Africa. Crescentinus is recorded on three stones from Africa and on as many from the Danube provinces.

The earliest uses of Crescens as a cognomen for legionaries have been found in Germany. These are in the following names: L. Aemilius L. f. Cla(udia) Crescens Ara, belonging to a soldier about the year 62, Q. Bruttius Q. f. Sergia Crescens domo Tucci and — Pollia Crescens Fano Fortunae, belonging to men in service before the reign of Vespasian.

Names containing this cognomen from the Danube provinces are all later than the first century. Vercellae and Carsulae are the homes of two men stationed in these provinces. A military list of the year 195 found at Viminacium contains three names with Crescens as the cognomen. Brixia and Augusta Vindelicum are the homes of two soldiers in Britain who bear the cognomen Crescens. The instances of Crescens (Cresces) in Africa range in date from the year 162 to 275. The following towns in Africa are given as the homes of men who possess this cognomen: Carthage, Cirta (3), Cuiculum, Hippo, Theveste, and the camp itself.

CRISPUS

The instances of Crispus as a legionary cognomen number twenty-four. Crispinus is represented by two inscriptions. The examples of Crispus are distributed as follows: The regions covered by CIL III furnish twelve; Africa contributes seven; Germany adds four; and England yields one. The last mentioned instance is the earliest one: viz., in the name of a veteran of the II Adiutrix when that legion was at Chester shortly after 71 A. D. An example of Crispus in a military inscription at Mainz is not wholly certain. If this be the correct restoration then the inscription belongs to the period before the principate of Vespasian, because the IIII Macedonica is the legion named therein. The home of the soldier (?) here named is Valentia. Crispus is found on a stone at Mainz as the cognomen of a soldier, whose home is Savaria, enrolled in the I Adiutrix toward the end of the first century. Crispus appears in the names of three legionaries in Egypt. Two of the men with this cognomen were in service in the year 90 and the third, born in camp, was a veteran in the year 94. The cases of Crispus in the Danube provinces extend through the second century.

Crispus in Africa is noted first as the cognomen of a veteran (?), whose home is Sidonia, in the reign of Hadrian. The latest inscription with Crispus belongs to the reign of Alexander Severus (222-235). Hadrumetum is the home of Ottacilius Crispus and C. Aelius Crispus was born in camp. Crispinus as a cognomen has been found in Africa. One instance of its use belongs perhaps to the latter part of the first century and another was found in a military list which is dated in the year 202.

DATUS

This cognomen, it may be said quite properly, is peculiar to Africa. Only two of the twenty-two examples are found outside that province. The two exceptions are M. Granius Datus, the name of a veteran of the II Adiutrix in Pannonia who indicates his African origin, domo Africa Sufetla, and M. Iulius Datus, the name of a soldier of the same legion at Carnuntum. The date of the first mentioned inscription is probably later than the middle of the second century when the II Adiutrix was in Africa for a time. The date of the second is not certain, but can not be earlier than the second century when this legion came into Pannonia.

The earliest inscription from Africa bearing this cognomen is earlier than the year 147. Thirteen others can be dated. They extend from the year 198 to the reign of Alexander Severus (222-235). Two stones record the names of men born in camp and these can not be far removed from the same period. Iulius Datus and Pompeus Datus of the year 202 have been identified with men bearing the same names of the year 218. Sextilius Datus, a cornicen of the year 203, it has been assumed, is the same Sextilius Datus who appears on a military list of the year 218. There is little to be said in one way or the other, so far as the nomina are concerned, because they are frequently found, but, inasmuch as the offices are the same in the case of each pair, this fact may be enough to make their identification probable. It has seemed wise, however, to print each name separately.

Attention may be called to the fact that no centurion with this cognomen is found in this list. Datus would seem then to be pre-eminently a soldier's name. (For the significance of this name and others peculiar to Africa vid. Chap. III, The Cognomina of African Legionaries.) It is also noticeable that Aelius is the only imperial nomen found with Datus. L. Fabius Dadatus has been regarded as a stone-cutter's error. Cognomina related to Datus are Dativus (218), Datullus (in the reign of Alexander Severus), Datianus (date uncertain); all found at Lambaesis.

DONATUS

Of the sixty-eight inscriptions which contain the cognomen Donatus four were found in the Danube provinces, two in England, and the remaining sixty-two in Africa. The surprisingly large proportion from Africa has been noticed so far only in the case of Datus treated above. A similar state of things may be observed in connection with several names which follow. (For all the cognomina popular in Africa vid. Chap. III, The Cognomina of African Legionaries.) The evidence supporting the use of Donatus is sufficient in quantity and of a character to afford a general idea of what is meant by a "popular" cognomen. The "typical" nomina are found in use with it. By glancing through the alphabetical list the frequency of these nomina may be noted under every cognomen which is used commonly in the later period. Among the familiar nomina are Aelius, Caecilius, Flavius, Iulius, and Valerius. As might have been expected Aurelius is not found with Donatus. Septimius and Ulpius are not represented in this group.

The earliest instance of the use of Donatus as a legionary cognomen belongs to the reign of Antoninus Pius. From this time until the year 275 all the dated military lists at Lambaesis contain one or more examples of Donatus. All the lower military grades are represented, but Donatus does not seem to have been much used as the cognomen of centurions before the year 253. Nine of the men bearing this cognomen were born in camp. Bagai, Cirta, Thamugadi, Theveste, and Thysdrus are African towns from which men named Donatus came. Napoca is the home of a tubicen in the principate of Antoninus Pius. A single instance of the cognomen Donatianus is found in the camp at Lambaesis. (Note: Following the general practice no attempt is made to determine the relations between the men bearing the name Iulius Donatus, but the names have been kept separate in the alphabetical list.)

EMERITUS

The instances of Emeritus as a cognomen for soldiers number twenty-three. Six of this group have been found in Pannonia, sixteen in Africa, and one example was recovered at Mainz. Of those from Pannonia none is earlier than the second century, and the earliest known date is 195, while the latest is 228. A centurion bearing this cognomen indicates Carnuntum as his home; a soldier gives Vieus Gallorum. The earliest use of this cognomen in Africa is placed in the year 162. The latest date for the appearance of an Emeritus is in the year 218. Two of the men who bear this cognomen were born in camp. No other homes are known. The single instance of Emeritus at Mainz is dated in the year 223. Aemeritus is the spelling of the cognomen in a military inscription at Lambaesis.

FAUSTUS

Faustus has been found as a cognomen in thirty names. Cognomina related to Faustus are Faustianus, three examples, Faustinus, fourteen, Faustinianus and Faustiolus, one example of each. Of the thirty examples of Faustus all except four are found in the names of members of the III Augusta in Africa. The four exceptions are scattered as follows: From Mainz an inscription belonging to the last third of the first century contains the name of a soldier whose cognomen is Faustus and whose home is Polentia; from Moesia a centurion whose service was later than the reign of Hadrian bears this cognomen; P. Porcius Faustus was a primus pilus at Aquileia in the reign of Septimius Severus; a veteran in Moesia recorded in an undated inscription has the cognomen Faustus.

In Africa Faustus appears in military inscriptions from the year 162 until the close of the reign of Alexander Severus. The following homes of men possessing this cognomen are preserved, Ammaedara (2), Capsa, Carthage, Cilium, and Tipasa. Two men were born in camp.

Of the fourteen examples of the use of Faustinus as a cognomen eleven are found in Lambaesis and its camp. These extend from the year 166 to 275. Carthage is the home of four men bearing this cognomen. Cirta is the home of one and another was born in camp. Outside of Africa the use of Faustinus as a cognomen belongs to the late second or third century. Faustianus is found twice at Lambaesis, once in Pannonia. Faustiolus appears on a stone at Lambaesis. Faustinianus is recorded in Moesia.

FELIX

In Felix we have what seems to be the most popular cognomen among the soldiers of Africa. The evidence showing the use of this cognomen is so abundant that it leaves little room for doubting that it was a name liked by the Africans. Cognomina in this list related to Felix are Felicianus and Felicissimus.

The examples of Felix used as a cognomen in the names of legionaries number two hundred and ten, and of these one hundred and eighty-one have been found in Africa. The provinces covered by CIL III afford fourteen instances, England contributes seven, Germany yields four, Italy furnishes three, and Spain is represented by one.

The earliest use of the cognomen Felix seems to be recorded on a papyrus from Egypt which gives the names of two soldiers in service in the year 90. Another instance of the use of Felix on a stone in Egypt belongs perhaps to the third century. Outside of Africa the cases of Felix as a cognomen are scattering. They extend through the second and third centuries, but so far as these occasional examples go there is little to distinguish Felix from other little used cognomina.

The moment one turns to a military list from Lambacsis or its camp, one is impressed by the very frequent use of this cognomen. A stone found at Thamugadi which records a veteran's name, Aufidius Felix, may belong to the close of the first century, before the III Augusta took its new quarters at Lambaesis. Soon after its arrival at this camp an inscription was cut in the reign of Hadrian preserving the name of a veteran (?), L. Gellius Felix, whose home was Carthage. The use of Felix extends as late as the year 275, after which date the epigraphical evidence is generally small in quantity. A list of legionaries cut in the year 218 contains no less than twenty-three instances of the use of the cognomen Felix. The homes of men bearing this cognomen are all African towns. The camp itself was the birthplace of eleven men. Carthage is given as the home of twelve legionaries. The name of one was recovered from a stone at Rome, of another in Moesia. Thamugadi and Cirta are indicated four times each as the home of men named Felix. Ten other towns are mentioned in inscriptions which preserve the name Felix.

In Africa Felix is not often found as the cognomen of a centurion. Four such cases have been noted. Among the inscriptions containing Felix from other provinces, seven record the names of men who were centurions. (L. Antonius Felix, whose home is Carthage, is recorded on a stone found in Moesia as a centurion of the III Augusta, X Gemina, and I Italica legions. Antonius Felix, the name of a man who was also a centurion of the III Augusta, is found on a stone at Lambaesis. It is possible to suppose that these two inscriptions refer to the same man and this suggestion has already been made. Cagnat, however, (L'Armée Romaine 1st ed. p. 204) has printed the two names separately and his practice has been followed here.)

The same name is often found more than once in a single military list (e. g. Valerius Felix, A. E. 1902: 10, and CIL VIII 2564), but is used to designate different persons. Iulius Felix with or without a praenomen has been found as the name of twenty-five men enrolled in the III Augusta. Any attempt to prove through repetition of name that men recorded on different stones are identical is almost futile unless other strong indications are found to warrant such an hypothesis. Thus, for example, Aufidius Felix, a duplarius, in VIII 2816 may be one of the men bearing this name mentioned in VIII 2564, but there is no apparent reason for identifying him with one or the other. It is not unreasonable to suppose that he may be a different person altogether. In this case and elsewhere it has been thought preferable to print the names separately in the alphabetical list.

One soldier bears a supernomen: viz., C. Tannonus Felix qui et Aquensis. For a collection and discussion of similar cases vid. Chap. III, Double Cognomina. For what appears to be a Punic equivalent of the Latin Felix, vid. Namphamo, Chap. II, Cognomina of Punic Origin, and Chap. III, Cognomina of African Legionaries. (Note: C. Domitius Felix (VIII 3097) was assigned by Van der Weerd (Études sur trois Legions romaines du Bas-Danube, p. 100) to the V Macedonica, following the index of CIL VIII, owing to what would appear to be an incorrect reading of the stone. The letters there are MILLEGVAXLV. The first "V" is undoubtedly for "vixit" and not for "quintae," cf. VIII 2827, 3020, and 3141 for a similar use.) For Felicianus and Felicissimus consult the alphabetical list.

FESTUS

Inscriptions bearing the cognomen Festus have been found in sufficient numbers to give the name a place in this chapter. Festianus and Festivus are cognomina related to Festus. The examples of Festus are distributed among the provinces as follows: The Danube provinces contribute three cases; Africa affords ten instances; Italy, Germany, and Spain yield two each; and one was found in Gallia Narbonensis. The last mentioned example is the first in point of time. The cognomen belongs to a man who served in the XVIth legion during the reign of Tiberius. Later instances of Festus are scattered from the close of the first to the early part of the third century. In Africa, Simitthus, Bulla, Carthage, and Madaura are indicated as homes of soldiers bearing the cognomen Festus. Calagurris is the birthplace of M. Aurelius Festus serving in Germany probably about the year 100. Siscia is the native town of L. Lucanius Festus, a soldier in Pannonia later than the first century.

FIRMUS

The examination of the cognomen Firmus was undertaken with great interest, inasmuch as it had been selected with Severus by Bormann (vid. Introduction.) as a name "zum Soldatendienst bestimmt." (Der roemische Limes in Oesterreich, Heft IV, 1903, p. 132.) The results are disappointing in that the cognomen falls far short of the popularity which some others enjoy, as far as one may judge from the number of the instances preserved. The cognomen Firmus has been found forty-three times. Cognomina related to Firmus are Firminus, Firmianus, Firmanus, Firminianus, and Firmidius. The examples of Firmus are distributed as follows: From inscriptions in CIL III the cognomen is taken twenty-two times; in Africa eleven instances have been found; in Germany and Italy, four each; in England and at Lyons, one each. The related cognomina follow this division: From the Danube provinces six instances are taken, Africa contributes Firmianus, Germany yields four, and Spain though not represented in the examples under Firmus furnishes instances of Firmanus and Firminus.

The earliest appearance of the cognomen is in a military list from Egypt belonging to the reign of Augustus. Here it is in the name of a centurion. A considerable number of names containing Firmus can be dated in the first century. Arelate and Verona are the homes of two soldiers during this period bearing the cognomen Firmus. In the Danube provinces this cognomen was in common use during the second century. No dated examples in the third century have been found. In Africa the uses of Firmus extend from the year 147 to 218. Picenum and Aspendus are the homes of two men who bear this cognomen. The camp itself was the birth-place of two others. Salona is given as the native town of a primus pilus in service in the year 147. While the name was current in Lambaesis it does not seem to have been a popular one. The form Firminus appears in Spain as a soldier's cognomen probably before the year 70. Other dated instances of its use belong to the late second century or first half of the third. Firmanus is the cognomen of a veteran whose home is Verona and whose service seems to be earlier than the reign of Hadrian. For the remaining related forms vid. alphabetical list.

FORTUNATUS

The cognomen Fortunatus has been listed fifty-nine times with this distribution among the provinces. The regions covered by CIL III offer four examples; Africa, forty-nine; Italy, three; England, Germany, and Lyons, one each. Fortunatianus is found twice at Lambaesis. Of the ten outside of Africa the earliest instance is that in the name of a soldier of the V Alauda before the year 87, L. Vidius Fortunatus at Tergeste. Other instances of Fortunatus are noted in the second and third centuries scattered among several provinces.

The large number found in Africa comes from Lambaesis or belongs to the III Augusta, with one exception, M. Petronius Fortunatus (VIII 217 q. v.), a centurion of two legions about the year 215. Besides this centurion there are four others with this cognomen, all outside of Africa. None of the forty-eight examples from men of the III Augusta are men of so high a rank. It is distinctly a cognomen for soldiers and petty officers. Instances of the cognomen Fortunatus are found from the first arrival of the legion at Lambaesis during the reign of Hadrian, down to the year 275. The homes of several men who bear this cognomen are known, three being from Carthage, from Hadrumetum two, from Cirta and Lamigus one each. Four men were born in camp and one gives Lambaesis as his birth-place. The two cases of Fortunatianus are undated, but the domus is given with both, Carthage and Caralis.

FRONTO

Fronto is used as a cognomen in military circles in thirty-two names. Of these instances nineteen have been found in the provinces included in CIL III, six appear in inscriptions from Africa, three from Italy, and two each from England and Germany. Cognomina related to Fronto are Frontinus, Frontianus, and Frontonianus.

Aquilius Fronto, a centurion in Dalmatia before the reign of Vespasian, affords us perhaps the earliest instance of the use of this cognomen. L. Gerellanus Fronto, a primus pilus of the X Fretensis and praefectus castrorum of the XII Fulminata in Syria in the principate of Nero, possesses rather high rank, but the name has been listed on account of the early date and the nomen in -us. Other first century cases of Fronto are preserved at Carnuntum, in Germany, and England. Instances of the cognomen Fronto appear in the Danube provinces, in Egypt and Africa, and in the East throughout the second century and during the early part of the third. Brixia, Celeia, and Sidonia are the homes of men bearing this cognomen. Two men named Fronto at Lambaesis were born in camp.

FUSCUS

The cognomen Fuscus is supported by the testimony of twenty-two military inscriptions. Fuscinus and Fuscianus also appear as cognomina for legionaries. The geographical distribution of the examples of Fuscus is as follows: From Egypt four instances are taken; from other provinces covered by CIL III, three; from Africa, ten; from Germany, three; from England and Rome, one each.

The earliest use of Fuscus is in the name of a soldier, whose home is Aprum, enrolled in the II Adiutrix in England about the year 71. Other first century cases are found at Mainz—in the name of a soldier whose home is Savaria—and in Egypt. In the latter province names containing Fuscus can be dated in the years 90 and 94. Another must be placed earlier than the year 108, and a fourth can not be later than the principate of Hadrian. The dated examples in Africa range from the first century (?) to the year 218. Carthage and Theveste are homes of men who bear the cognomen Fuscus. Lugus is the home of T. Riburinnius Fuscus, a soldier in the Spanish legion, VII Gemina. L. Fadienus Fuscus, a veteran in Dalmatia, indicates Dertona as his native town. For Fuscinus and Fuscianus vid. alphabetical list.

GERMANUS

The cognomen Germanus has been found twenty-nine times in names of legionary soldiers. The geographical distribution is as follows: From the provinces covered by CIL III sixteen instances have been taken; Africa contributed twelve examples; Germany, four; and Spain, one.

The earliest use of Germanus in this group belongs to the name of a soldier, whose home is Tyre, serving in Egypt in the year 81. Other instances from Egypt can be dated in the years 90, 94, and in the period before the year 108. Another of the year 194 belongs to a veteran born in camp. Three cases in Moesia are dated in the second century. Seupi and Pessenuntum are the homes of two men who bear this cognomen. Four inscriptions found in Arabia record names with the cognomen Germanus. Two of these inscriptions are dated in the latter part of the second century. The inscriptions containing Germanus which have been found on German soil are all later than the first century. The home of one legionary bearing this cognomen is Emona in Pannonia. One Germanus adds natione Dacus, another, natione Batavus.

From Lambaesis Germanus appears first in inscriptions cut during the reign of Antoninus Pius and from this time to the stormy reign of Gallienus (253–268) examples are found. One man born in camp received the cognomen Germanus. A soldier in Arabia had besides the cognomen Germanus the native name of Ἀουεῖδος. For this supernomen, vid. Chap. III, Double Cognomina.

HONORATUS

Thirty examples of the cognomen Honoratus are recorded in the present list. Of this number twenty-seven are found in Africa. One case has been noted from Pannonia, from Germany, and from England. None of the last three mentioned can be dated definitely. An examination of the great majority from Africa shows that all but one belong to the names of men enrolled in the III Augusta and with few exceptions are found in Lambaesis and its camp. Fifteen can be definitely dated and fall in the period from the year 198 to the close of the reign of Alexander Severus (222-235). None of the men in the III Augusta who bear the cognomen Honoratus are centurions. On this point one may compare the usage followed in the case of the cognomen Fortunatus. Thamugadi, Cirta, and Carthage are indicated as the homes of men named Honoratus. Honoratianus is the cognomen of two centurions in the III Augusta, M. Calpurnius Honoratianus and another whose nomen is not preserved, about the year 150.

IANUARIUS

(Vid. Gottanka, Epigraphische Beiträge p. 39f. Augsburg, 1912.) This cognomen has been found seventy-eight times among the legionaries, with the following distribution in the provinces: From those covered by CIL III fourteen examples have been collected; from Africa, fifty-nine; from England, Germany, France, Spain, and Italy, one each. One of the earliest is in an inscription from Mainz, M'. Silius Ianuarius, a centurion of the I Adiutrix between the years 70 and 100. In the Danube provinces the cognomen is found in three military lists of the second century. On one of these cut in the year 195 the homes of two veterans named Ianuarius are known; the towns mentioned are in the province of Moesia. Another in Dalmatia belongs to the second century. Later Ianuarius is found in the reign of Alexander Severus. The example in England appears in the name M. Ulpius Ianuarius, who was born at Ulpia Traiana; legion and date are uncertain.

Of the fifty-nine from Africa, thirty-one can be dated, and practically all the dated military lists from the year 162 to 275 show one or more examples of this name. Ianuarius is another of the cognomina which are unusually popular among the soldiers of the III Augusta in their camp at Lambaesis. The homes of ten men named Ianuarius are known. These are all African towns; two persons are from Carthage; two were born in camp.

In some cases it may be that we have a name repeated, e. g., Carcopino identifies the Iulius Ianuarius of Bull. Archeol. 1904 p. 206 with one of those from VIII 2564, but such identifications are only conjectures (Vid. Felix), and both names are included in this list. Iulius Ianuarius is such a common name that the identity of those who possess it cannot be assumed.

INGENUUS

This cognomen appears in the inscriptions in two forms: viz., Ingenuus and Ingenuus. Ingenuinus and Ingenuilis are cognate forms. Eugenius would seem to be due to Greek influence. Ingenuus as a cognomen is found in twenty-two names, Ingenuus in sixteen. The geographical distribution of these thirty-eight instances is as follows: The provinces the inscriptions of which are embraced in CIL III contribute sixteen; Africa supplies fourteen; Italy, three; Germany and England, two each; and Spain, one.

The earliest use of Ingenuus seems to be as the cognomen of a centurion named in the inscription from Spain just mentioned. This officer was enrolled in the Xth legion which left Spain in the year 70. Two other first century cases are noted and the cognomen continued in use throughout the second and third centuries. In Africa, Carthage, Hippo, and the camp are indicated as the birth-place of men bearing the cognomen Ingenuus or Ingenuus. A soldier of the VI Victrix stationed in Africa, T. Flavius Ingenuus, adds after his name provincia Britanniae Inferioris. Similarly Aurelius Ingenuus, a soldier of the XIII Gemina serving in Rome adds natione provincia Dacia. For M. Ingenius Ingenuinus vid. Chap. III, Similarity between Nomen and Cognomen.

IULIANUS

Before discussing Iulianus, the use of Iulius as a cognomen should be mentioned. Five examples of such use of Iulius have been collected. Four of these were found in the Danube provinces, two of the cases appearing in a list of veterans of the year 195. Sirmium and Scupi are the homes of men bearing this cognomen. Two other instances of Iulius are later than the first century. The remaining example is preserved on a stone from Africa in the name Avicius Iulius, who was a soldier in the XVIth legion.

Iulianus is listed as a cognomen fifty-one times. This number includes the cognomen Iulanus where a letter may have been omitted by the stone-cutter. Iullinus, if this reading of the stone is correct, seems to be related to Iulianus. The examples of Iulianus are divided among the provinces as follows: From the territory covered epigraphically by CIL III twenty-four instances have been taken; from Africa, nineteen; from Germany, four; from Italy, two; from Spain and England, one each. The earliest use is as the cognomen of a centurion at Carnuntum in the XV Apollinaris before the year 63. From Egypt we have two centurions of the III Cyrenaica named Iulianus before that legion left the province in the year 108. T. Flavius Iulianus, a veteran of the VIII Augusta in Syria, belongs to the latter part of the first century. Examples from the Danube provinces are found for over a century following the year 134.

In Lambaesis the earliest instances are found in the names of two veterans (?) in the reign of Hadrian. One bearing this cognomen comes from Tyre, the other from Nicomedia. Other dated inscriptions which record the name Iulianus at Lambaesis extend from the year 162 to the reign of Gallienus (253–268). The homes of nine men who bear this cognomen are known. C. Aelius Iulianus comes from Sarmizegetusa in Dacia. The two contemporary with Hadrian have already been mentioned. Two men were born in camp. Thamugadi is the birthplace of one, possibly of another legionary. Carthage and Tharsus sent men named Iulianus to the legion at Lambaesis. Hadrumetum, often mentioned as the home of soldiers of the III Augusta, is given by Iulianus, a veteran of the II Traiana in Alexandria in the year 194, as his birth-place.

A stone recently found affords another example of a supernomen, L. Decrius Iulianus qui et Numisianus, a princeps of the XI Claudia in the period from 100–150 at Naples. (Vid. Chap. III, Double Cognomina). For the many instances of the name Iulius Iulianus cf. Claudius Claudianus and for other similar names vid. Chap. III, Similarity between Nomen and Cognomen.

IUSTUS

Thirty examples of the use of Iustus as a cognomen have been collected. Eleven of these are found in the provinces embraced by CIL III; seven come from Africa; six from England; five from Germany; and one from Italy. The earliest instance of the use of Iustus is as the cognomen of a centurion in Egypt in the time of Augustus. Of the examples found in the Danube provinces, Metilius Iustus is the name of a centurion of the XV Apollinaris in Carnuntum. From this case we pass to a military list of the year 195 A. D. before another use of Iustus in this section can be dated. At this time three veterans of the VII Claudia at Viminacium have the cognomina Iustus, L. Apuleius Iustus from Remesiana, if this restoration of the name of the town be correct, Aelius Iustus from Salona, and another, whose nomen is lost, from Sirmium. Two examples can be dated in the first quarter of the third century. One appears in the name of M. Aurelius Iustus, whose home is Horreum Margi in Moesia Superior. Two cases from Lambaesis belong to the reign of Alexander Severus (222-235). The others are not dated. The large proportion from England is not usual. Possibly the same name is repeated in two inscriptions and in this case the number of the examples would be lessened, but there is no cogent reason for any such supposition. It might be noted that ten centurions have the cognomen Iustus, or one-third, a large proportion, of the whole number.

Iustinus is the cognomen of fourteen legionaries. All seem to be later than the first century. Eight instances appear in the Danube provinces; three of these are dated toward the end of the second century. The remaining examples are found in Italy, Germany, and England. No use of the cognomen Iustinus among African soldiers is preserved. Iustianus is represented by three cases. Two belong to the third century.

LONGINUS

The cognomen Longinus has been found in the military inscriptions in greater numbers than Longus, which properly deserves mention first. Other related cognomina are Longinianus and Longo. For the latter vid. Chap. II, Cognomina Ending in -o. The examples of Longus as a cognomen number sixteen. The earliest uses are found in the names of two centurions serving in Egypt during the reign of Augustus. Three instances of Longus are preserved on a papyrus from Egypt of the year 90. Inscriptions in this same province which can be dated in the years 94 and 194 contain the name Longus. Paraetonium is the home of M. Furfanius Longus, a veteran in the year 194.

Longus is recorded as the cognomen of a centurion in Africa in the interval between the years 52 and 57. A later example in the principate of Hadrian from this province serves as the cognomen of a veteran (?) whose home is Apamea. Inscriptions from the Danube provinces containing this cognomen range through the second century. On two stones only the letters LONG are recorded and it is impossible to determine whether the cognomen was Longus or Longinus.

The cognomen Longinus has been found in thirty-four names of legionaries. Of this number twenty-seven have been taken from the provinces embraced in CIL III, three come from Africa, two each from Italy and Germany. Three examples belong to the latter half of the first century. Savaria, Philippi, and Heraclea are given as the homes of men who bear the cognomen Longinus in this period. In the Danube provinces eleven instances can be dated in the first half of the second century. A list of veterans cut about the year 134 contains Longinus six times and three of those cases preserving the letters LONG were found on this stone. Another list of the year 195 in Moesia records the cognomen Longinus in three names. The homes of the veterans bearing this cognomen are towns in that region. One third century example is preserved. In Egypt Longinus appears twice on a papyrus as the cognomen of men enrolled in the III Cyrenaica before that legion left the province in the year 108. Examples are recorded on stones also which can be dated in the second and third centuries. Longinus at Lambaesis appears once as the cognomen of a man born in camp. Neither this instance nor the other two can be dated.

Longinianus is found at Lambaesis as often as Longinus. One case is dated in the reign of Septimius Severus. This cognomen is found once in an inscription in Pannonia, and again at Aquileia, on which stone the centurion indicates his birthplace as Moesia Inferior.

(MARCUS) MARCELLINUS, MARCELLUS, MARCIANUS

With the uses of Marcus as a cognomen there must be included Marciarus, Marculus, Marcellus, and Marcellinus. The number of examples of each cognomen are: Marcus, sixteen; Marciarus, thirty-two; Marculus, one; Marcellus, twenty-three; Marcellinus, twenty-two. The total is then ninety-three, which is distributed as follows among the provinces: Forty-eight from the provinces included in CIL III; nineteen from Africa; thirteen from Italy; nine from inscriptions in CIL XIII; three from England; one from Spain. CIL III affords the greater number in each single name as well as in the total.

Marcus is not found in Africa. The earliest case seems to be Iulius Marcus, the name of a soldier in Moesia Inferior in the year 155. At Alexandria in the year 194 two veterans bearing the cognomen Marcus are recorded in a military list; both were born in camp. The majority of the dated examples fall in the late second or third centuries.

Marcianus is used more than any other cognomen formed on this stem and these examples are probably all later than the first century, at least all the dated ones are. Marcianus is found in Moesia in the year 135 and in the legion VII Claudia at Viminacium, to which Aelius Marcianus of this year belongs, were enrolled in the year 195 three Marciani, coming from Scupi, Nicopolis, and Ratiaria. Nearly a century later in the year 270 Aurelius Marcianus was an officer at the same place. Others from the Danube region are dated in the early third century. T. Flavius Marcianus, a centurion in Arabia, gives Philippopolis as his home.

At Lambaesis the usage extends over a long period. Two veterans (?) during the reign of Hadrian bearing this cognomen came from Nicomedia. Others are dated in the third century. The homes of two undated legionaries are Oea and Thamugadi. The only example of a Marcianus born in camp is found in Moesia in the year 170.

Marcellus appears earlier among the soldiers than the other cognomina in this group. M. Vibrius Marcellus, a centurion of the XVIth legion at Rome, belongs to the time of Tiberius or Gaius. Salvius Marcellus, a centurion of the XV Apollinaris at Carnuntum, is probably earlier than the year 63. Maecius Marcellus, a centurion of the XI Claudia in Italy, is dated in the year 75. A centurion Marcellus in the III Augusta at Thamugadi was in service in the latter half of the first century. Two soldiers named Marcellus came from towns outside of Africa: one in the reign of Hadrian, from Larisa, another in the reign of Antoninus Pius, from Ivenna in Noricum. (This reading for the name of the town is not wholly certain.) Other dated examples at Lambaesis belong to the early third century.

The homes of some men in other provinces are known: M. Fuficius Marcellus in Pannonia Superior comes from Aquileia; M. Seius Marcellus at Athens, from Forum Iulii; M. Valerius Marcellus, from Vercellae. None of these is dated. A very late example of Marcellus appears in the year 298 in the name of a centurion of the II Traiana in Egypt.

Marcellinus is not frequent in the first century. C. Iulius Marcellinus from Tavium was in Alexandria before the year 108. T. Aridius Marcellinus was a centurion at the same place in the year 155. And in the year 194 we find Baebius Marcellinus also at Alexandria. In Pannonia two examples are found in the early third century. At Viminacium in Moesia in the year 195 one veteran, M. Valerius Marcellinus, came from Scupi. Later than the year 170 is the name Marcellinius Marcellinus. (Vid. Chap. III, Similarity between Nomen and Cognomen.) L. Septimius Marcellinus in Germany was born in Pannonia at Ulpia Papiria Petavio and served as a centurion in three legions during the reign of Alexander Severus (222–235). Marcus is found as the cognomen of a legionary at Vienna. The nomen is lost and the date is uncertain.

MARTIALIS

The cognomen has been found among members of the legions fifty-two times, and of this number thirty-eight were collected from African inscriptions, eight were taken from the provinces embraced by CIL III, four from Germany, one each from Rome and England.

The group of examples from Germany is worthy of note because all four are early. Iulius Martialis, a centurion of the IV Macedonica, served before the reign of Vespasian. M. Vibius Martialis, a centurion of the X Gemina, held office in the interval between the principates of Vespasian and Domitian. Aufidius Martialis, a centurion of the I Minervia, belongs to the reign of Domitian. C. Memmius Martialis, a centurion of the XI Claudia, was in service in the period from the reign of Vespasian to that of Trajan. Of the last mentioned legion a soldier of the period from the year 42 to 70 is found, L. Cassius Martialis from Aquae Statiellae, serving in Dalmatia. Examples of Martialis in the Danube provinces belong to the second century. The home of one veteran bearing this cognomen is known and it is a town in this same region.

The earliest instance in Africa is dated in the latter half of the first century. More than half of this group of names can be dated and such examples are found throughout the second century and the first half of the third. Two men bearing the cognomen Martialis belonging to the reign of Hadrian came from Apamea and Carthage. Other places indicated as homes are Ammaedara, vicus Augusti, Cilium, Thamugadi, Thelepte, and Vaga. Two born in camp received the cognomen Martialis. Only one centurion named Martialis in Africa has been recovered. Note the early group from Germany on this point and consult also the cognomen Honoratus.

The cognomen Martis may be mentioned in this connection. One example has been found at Lambaesis.

MAXIMUS

Besides the form Maximus, this cognomen appears as Maxsimus, Maxunus, and Maxsumus. Cognomina related to Maximus are Maximinus, Maxsiminus, Maximianus, and Maximo. (For the last mentioned see Chap. II, Cognomina Ending in -o.) The geographical distribution of the examples of Maximus (including the variant spellings) is as follows: From the provinces included in CIL III seventy have been taken; from Africa, fifty-one; from England, ten; from Germany, seven; from Italy, six; from Spain, two. (Total, one hundred and forty-six.)

It is scarcely profitable to examine each name singly; only those valuable on account of date or for other reasons can be mentioned. Perhaps the earliest use is in the name of A. Resius Maximus, a centurion of the XI Claudia in Dalmatia about the year 42. Two examples are found in Carnuntum as the cognomina of men in service possibly before the year 63. C. Attius Maxsimus, whose home is Baeterae, was a soldier at Mainz in the period from 43-70.

The cognomen is found throughout the second and third centuries in the Danube provinces. In Moesia a military list of the year 135 contains seven examples of this cognomen and another of the year 195 has preserved eight cases of Maximus.

The latter inscription records also the home of each veteran. For men bearing this cognomen the homes indicated are Seupi, Ratiaria, and Pautalia. In other localities legionaries with the cognomen Maximus come from Roma, Sirmium, and Mantua. A veteran serving in Alexandria gives Caesarea as his home.

In Africa Maximus is reasonably common as the cognomen of soldiers in the III Augusta legion. Military lists of the principates of Hadrian and Antoninus Pius show the name somewhat more frequently than later inscriptions, although Maximus is found as late as the second half of the third century. The soldiers enrolled when Hadrian was emperor came from Nicomedia, Tolomais, and Parethonium. The homes of men with the cognomen Maximus as recorded on later stones are Savaria, Napoca, Capsa, Hadrumetum, Tharsus, Theveste, and Thysdrus. Six men were born in camp, one in Lambaesis.

In Germany three of the seven cases of Maximus belong to legionaries enrolled in the XI Claudia in the interval between the reigns of Vespasian and Trajan. One of these men came from Forum Cornelii, another from Augustomemetum.

Maximinus and Maximianus are with one possible exception comparatively late.

Cognomina which have some connection with Maximus in meaning if not in form and consequently properly mentioned here are Maior, Magnus, Magnius, Magnianus, and Magnio. Maior has been found as a cognomen nine times. One example belongs to the first century. The other cases seem to be much later and scattered among several provinces.

The cognomen Magnus is represented by fifteen examples. One instance is extremely early: viz., C. Titius Magnus, who was a signifer of the V Urbana at Ateste possibly soon after 31 B. C. Two other examples belong to the first century and names of a still later date extend the series until the third century. Magnius and Magnianus are cognomina found at Lambaesis.

NIGER

The cognomen Niger is supported by nineteen examples from inscriptions and papyri. Another instance is listed to make the required number, but the cognomen in question may be either Niger or Nigrinus. Besides Nigrinus, Nigrianus is also used by the soldiers. The cases of Niger are distributed as follows: From the provinces covered by CIL III ten examples have been taken; from Africa, three; from Italy, six; and from Germany, one.

The earliest instance of the use of Niger as a cognomen is preserved in the name of M. Tudius Niger, a member of the V Urbana legion possibly soon after the year 31 B. C.; the stone was found at Ateste. A veteran in Dalmatia in the period between the year 42 and the principate of Vespasian, whose home was Forum Iulii, bears this cognomen. In Egypt the cognomen Niger appears on papyri which can be dated in the years 90 and 94 and on two stones cut before the year 108. Instances of the use of Niger are found in inscriptions from Moesia and from Africa later than the first century. Two men bearing this cognomen at Lambaesis are of African origin. In other provinces Nicopolis, Antioch, and Carcaso are indicated as the homes of men named Niger.

Nigrinus is found as the cognomen of a soldier in service before the reign of Hadrian. All the instances of its use are widely scattered. Nigrianus is preserved in one inscription at Vienna.

OPTATUS

Thirty-four examples of the cognomen Optatus among the legionaries have been collected. Six are found in the Danube provinces; nineteen, in Africa; five, in Germany; two, in Italy, and one each, in England and Spain.

The cognomen is noted in two early inscriptions, one in Dalmatia borne by a soldier, Q. Gavius Optatus from Brixellum, of the XIth legion, probably before the year 42, as "Claudia" is not added to the number of the legion. The other case, assigned to the early period because of the omission of the "cognomen" of the legion, belongs to C. Iulius Optatus, whose home is Lugudunum, a soldier of the XVIth legion at Mainz. Two others from Germany are earlier than the end of Vespasian's reign; T. Clodius Optatus and L. Piperacius Optatus, both born in Augusta Taurinorum. P. Aelius Optatus, a soldier of the XXth legion in Italy has been dated with a question in the reign of Tiberius, because this legion was sent to Britain under Claudius. Eporedia and Aquae Sextiae are the homes of men named Optatus who may have enrolled in the first century.

In Africa where the cognomen Optatus is most frequently found all the men who bear it belong to the III Augusta. Ten of the names can be dated. The earliest are about the year 198 and the use continues through the reign of Alexander Severus (222-235). Optatus is the cognomen of two men born in camp. Other soldiers possessing this cognomen came from Bagai, Hippo, Milevum, and Tipasa.

PRIMUS

The first use of Primus in the Roman name seems to have been as a praenomen, vid. CIL XIII 6885. By the middle of the first century, however, it is found in the army as a cognomen. Fifty examples have been collected. Of this number fifteen were found in the provinces embraced in CIL III; twenty-seven, in Africa; six, in Germany; one each, in England and Italy.

Perhaps the earliest to bear the cognomen are two members of the XV Apollinaris at Carnuntum before the year 63, a veteran, C. Arruntius Primus from Hasta (Assta), and Eetius Primus, a centurion. Placentia, Comum, and Utica are the homes of men named Primus during the first century. A few examples outside of Africa can be dated in the second and third centuries. Q. Iulius Primus, an imaginifer of the II Traiana after the year 214, was transferred from the III Augusta. Inasmuch as his home is Theveste this man is better joined with those named Primus from Africa. Dated cases in Africa are scattered through the military lists ranging from the year 198 to the end of the reign of Alexander Severus (222-235). Two of the soldiers were born in camp. Three give Carthage as their home. Vaga and Tubuna are also mentioned.

Several cognomina derived from this root may be noted here: Primanus, four examples, all later than the first century; Priminianus, two examples; Primicianus, Primitius, Primigenius, and Primitivos are related forms from inscriptions in Africa. Primitus and Primullus are found on stones from Pannonia. Primulus appears on a stone in Germany with the nomen Primanius, vid. Chap. III, Similarity between Nomen and Cognomen. Prior is the cognomen of a soldier (?), whose home is Siscia, serving at Lambaesis.

PRISCUS

Forty examples of the use of Priscus as a cognomen have been collected. Cognomina related to Priscus are Priscinus, Priscianus, and Priscillianus. The geographical distribution of the examples of Priscus is as follows: From the provinces covered by CIL III seventeen examples have been taken; from Africa, eight; from inscriptions published in CIL XIII, six; from Italy, five; from England, four. In the names from England the name Sentius Priscus appears on two stones; probably the same man is referred to in both inscriptions. Valerius Priscus and C. Valerius Priscus are recorded as centurions of the XXII<sup>d</sup> legion at Thebes, Egypt, in the year 65. These inscriptions without doubt contain the name of the same man. These names just mentioned constitute the earliest use of the cognomen Priscus. Instances of this cognomen on stones cut in the first century are noted in Dalmatia, in Egypt, in Africa, and at Mainz. One of the soldiers at Mainz who bears the cognomen Priscus names Tolosa as his home. Instances of the use of Priscus in scattered localities can be dated throughout the second century and the first half of the third. Three of the men named Priscus in African inscriptions are not natives of that province. The cases of Priscus on military lists of the years 162 and 202 probably are to be thought of as belonging to men born in Africa.

The dated examples of Priscinus and Priscianus belong to the late second century or the first half of the third. Priscillianus is the cognomen of a signifer whose home is Caesarea, stationed at Alexandria in the year 194.

PROCULUS

(For this cognomen vid. Schulze, Lateinische Eigennamen, p. 460). The cognomen appears also in the form Proclus. The cognate forms, Proculinus, Proclinus, Proculeianus, Proculeanus, Proclianus, and Proclion are found among the legionary cognomina. Proculus and Proclus are represented by sixty examples and the cases of each are listed separately. Their geographical distribution is as follows: From the provinces included in CIL III twenty-two examples have been taken; from Africa, thirteen; from Germany, five; from Italy, four; from England, eight; and from Spain, one.

First century instances of Proculus are contained in the names of C. Valerius Proculus whose home is Baeterrae, of two centurions in England, of Q. Iulius Proculus, whose home may be Damascus, of C. Cornelius Proculus, whose home is Regium, and of two with the cognomen Proclus. Several inscriptions cut in the second century preserve the cognomen Proculus or Proclus in the Danube provinces. C. Valerius Proculus indicates Calagurris as his home. At Lambaesis inscriptions with Proculus extend from the reign of Hadrian to the year 275. Homes of men bearing this cognomen are Sidonia, Carthage, Ariminum, Adana, and Thelepte.

Worthy of mention are the following: Aurelius Proculus natione Surus domo Hemesa; P. Tarrutenius Proculus, whose home is Taurini; T. Iavennius Proculus, whose birth-place is Faventia.

All the known dates of the appearance of any cognomen related to Proculus are later than the first century. Proclion seems to be due to Greek influence. The single example appears in the name of a veteran whose home and station is Alexandria. The inscription was cut in the year 194.

PUDENS

In addition to thirty-seven examples of the cognomen Pudens there are two instances of the spelling Pudes. The cognomen Pudentianus is preserved in one inscription. The distribution of the cases of Pudens and Pudes is as follows: From countries covered by CIL III sixteen have been taken; from Africa, nine; from Germany and England, five each; from Italy, three; and from Spain, one.

Pudens or Pudes appear in the following names of men in service in the first century: C. Vibius Pudes, whose home is Aretium (42-70); T. Valerius Pudens, whose home is Savaria (in England about the year 71); C. Valerius Pudes, also born at Savaria (possibly of the first century); —esis Pudens (?) whose home is Augusta (also in England about the year 71); M. Blossius Pudens (serving in Rome during the reign of Vespasian), Sex. Licinius Pudens (84); L. Flavius Pudens (70-100); and Aponius Pudens (before the year 63, following Mommsen's interpretation of CIL III 14358: 21a). The cognomen is read on a papyrus of the first century from Egypt. Two inscriptions can be dated not later than the early part of the second century. The names on these stones are Q. Lucilius Pudens, a soldier at Vindonissa, who was born at Bergomum, and G. Iulius Pudens, a veteran of the X Gemina from Emona. M. Mucius Pudens, a soldier of the XXIId legion at Mainz from Albingaunum, should perhaps be assigned to an early date an account of his Italian origin. In the Danube region Pudens continues as a cognomen through the second century and probably into the third, although none is actually dated after the year 200. In Egypt the latest date is in the year 194; Servilius Pudens, a centurion. In Africa in the principate of Antoninus Pius, a Pudens from Emona was librarius of the III Augusta. Pelagonia is the home of C. Domitius Pudens at the same camp. (It will be noted that five names found in other provinces belong to men who were born in the Danube region and thus add appreciably to the majority already given from that locality.) Other dated uses of Pudens at Lambaesis fall in the third century. One man of this name was born in camp. Pudentianus is recorded on a stone at Lambaesis.

ROGATUS AND ROGATIANUS

All except two of the forty-four examples of the cognomen Rogatus belong to men enrolled in the III Augusta legion. All except two of the instances were found in Africa. These are C. Iulius Rogatus mentioned on an inscription of the year 211 found in Pannonia, who served as a soldier in the III Augusta and later in the II Adiutrix, and C. Iulius Rogatus, a beneficiarius consularis of the XI Claudia recorded on an undated inscription found in Dalmatia.

It is reasonable to infer then that we have here a cognomen peculiarly African. (See also Chap. III, Cognomina of the African Legionaries.) The evidence in the case of Rogatianus is similarly convincing, since all of the twenty examples have been found in Africa. (A study of these two cognomina, Rogatus and Rogatianus, in the index of cognomina in CIL III and VIII, gives further testimony to their popularity in Africa.)

In point of time Rogatus appears first as a cognomen. The earliest dated instance belongs to a veteran (?) whose home is Hadrumetum, in service while Hadrian was emperor. From this time examples of Rogatus appear on inscriptions which can be dated as late as the first quarter of the third century. Besides the camp itself, Ammaedara and Carthage are mentioned as homes of men bearing this cognomen.

Rogatianus does not appear on dated inscriptions until the third century. And all of the examples which can be dated exactly belong to the first half of this century. The soldiers bearing this cognomen are probably all of African origin. The homes mentioned are the camp, Lambaesis and Thysdrus.

One inscription from Civitas Celtianensium deserves especial notice, because Q. Oppius Rogatus who is referred to on the stone is a veteran of the I Adiutrix. Neither Juneman (De legione romana I Adiutrice) nor Cagnat (L'Armée Romaine d'Afrique 2d. ed., p. 220-1) mentions this inscription in speaking of the movements of this legion in Africa. If this inscription may be dated with the others containing the name of this legion, i. e., about the year 150, then we have an early use of the cognomen and the veteran may have come from Pannonia.

RUFUS AND RUFINUS

Examples of Rufus to the number of ninety-six have been collected. The cognomen Rufinus is represented by thirty-one examples. The geographical distribution of the cases of Rufus is as follows: From the provinces included in CIL III forty examples have been taken; from Africa, twenty-seven; from inscriptions in CIL XIII, six; from Italy, nine; from England, eight; from Spain, five; and from Gallia Narbonensis, one.

The earliest instance of the use of the cognomen is in the name C. Aebutius Rufus, an aquilifer of the XIth legion. The inscription was found at Ateste and probably is one of a group at that place preserving the names of men sent there after the battle of Actium. Another example is in the name Vettius Rufus borne by a centurion in Egypt during the principate of Augustus. Rufus is found as a cognomen in military inscriptions of the first century no less than fifteen times. Men bearing this cognomen indicate as their homes Aprum, Aequum, Ara Agrippinensium, and Ravenna. Throughout the second century dated examples may be noted from the Danube provinces and Egypt. The homes of legionaries named Rufus in this period are Amasia, Vicetia, Heraclea, Concordia, Beneventum (?), and Cremona. In Africa the series of instances extends through the second century and into the third. Men bearing this cognomen were enrolled from Antioch, Nicomedia, Anthedo, Iguvium, Lambaesis, and its camp, Hadrumetum, and Prusias.

The examples of Rufinus do not follow the same lines of distribution among the provinces as have been noted in the case of Rufus. It may be observed that usually related cognomina flourish in the general region where the form from which they came is common. Of the thirty-one cases collected three were found in the Danube provinces; twenty-one, in Africa; two each in Italy, Germany, and England; and one in Spain.

The earliest appearance is in the name of a signifer in England from Vienna toward the end of the first century. In Africa the use of Rufinus extends on dated inscriptions from the year 162 to the reign of Alexander Severus (222–235). Men bearing this cognomen joined the legion from Carthage, Thelepte, and the camp itself. Outside of Africa, Virunum and Aequum are the homes of men serving in Mainz and Ravenna. In Spain Q. Cumelius Rufinus set up a tombstone to his father whose home was Brixellum.

SABINUS

The cognomen Sabinus has been found in forty-two legionary names. The cognate form Sabinianus is represented in eight names. Sabius as a cognomen is possibly the error of the engraver for Sabinus. The distribution of the cases of Sabinus is as follows: Twenty-three are from provinces covered epigraphically by CIL III; ten come from Africa; five are taken from Italy; three are found in inscriptions in CIL XIII; and one, in England.

The first instances of Sabinus in point of time are not earlier than the middle of the first century. Later examples extend the use of the cognomen throughout the second century and into the third. The following cases deserve mention: L. Rutius Sabinus has recorded after his name on the stone the words ex Hispania. Since this man is a soldier of the X Gemina he may have been enrolled when this legion was stationed in Spain before the year 70. L. Petronius Sabinus, who served in three legions during the reign of Antoninus Pius, gives Forum Brentanum as his home. Cornelius Sabinus, whose home was Nieomedia, saw service at Lambaesis in the reign of Hadrian. M. Antonius Sabinus was a centurion in the X Fretensis before being transferred to the III Augusta. His home is Caesarea Augusta in Palestine. Q. Fabius Sabinus at the camp in Lambaesis indicates Carthage as his birth-place. C. Iulius Sabinus enrolled from Ratiaria in the VII Claudia and is recorded as a veteran in the year 195. Valerius Sabinus was born at Narbo.

Sabinianus is used as a cognomen in the later period. All the known dates are in the third century. At Lambaesis one soldier bearing this cognomen was born in camp. Another legionary at the same place came from Carthage. (For Salonius Sabinianus signo Scammatus vid. Chap. III, Double Cognomina.) Sabius appears as the cognomen in the name Aurelius Sabius nat Surus on a stone in Egypt.

SATURNINUS

Saturninus is second in popularity to Felix as a cognomen among the soldiers of the legions. The examples collected number one hundred and eighty-three. Cognate forms which appear are Saturnanus, Saturnilus, Saturnalis, Saturnus, Saturus, and Saturio. The geographical distribution of the evidence showing the use of Saturninus is as follows: From the provinces covered by CIL III, twenty-four cases; from Africa, one hundred thirty-nine; from Italy, ten; from Germany, six; from England, three; and from Spain, one.

The earliest examples are contained in the names of two signiferi in the year 65 at Alexandria. Their home is Aneyra. Two other instances belonging to the first century occur in Dalmatia and two in Egypt. A stone in Italy of the first century contains the name M. Valerius Saturninus, borne by a soldier of the IX Hispana whose home is Forum Iulii. A veteran of the XIIIth legion, M. Furius Saturninus, may have served in the first century. Dated cases of Saturninus in the Danube provinces for the second century are few in number. Scupi and Sarmizegetusa are the homes of two veterans bearing this cognomen, recorded in a military list in the year 195.

In Africa the earliest examples of Saturninus have been found at Theveste, the camp of the III Augusta in the latter half of the first century. Examples at Lambaesis range from the time of the arrival of the legion at that camp during the principate of Hadrian until the latter part of the third century. On one military list in the year 218, eighteen men bear the cognomen Saturninus. The homes of the men named Saturninus in Africa are for the most part places in that province. Eleven towns in Africa are given by several men as their birth-place. Heliopolis and Siscia are the homes outside of Africa which are named. Some examples of Saturninus in the third century have been found outside of Africa, but these are few in number.

Of the cognate forms, Saturnanus in Italy is later than the year 170. Saturnilus is found on two papyri in Egypt belonging to the first half of the second century. Saturnalis and Saturio are found on two stones in Germany. Saturnus is the cognomen of a legionary in Pannonia whose home is Cetium. Saturus is perhaps used for Saturnus. (Concerning the omission of "n" after "r" vid. Hoffman, De Titulis Africae Latinis, p. 32, who does not mention this case.) It is possible to derive the cognomen from the Greek Satyrus where "y" becomes "u" (for this phenomenon in Africa vid. Hoffmann, op. cit. p. 70.) As a soldier's cognomen Saturus is found at Lambaesis on seven stones; 166 and 200 are the only dates known. (Note: In the matter of repetition of names with the cognomen Saturninus the same practice has been followed as in other names in this chapter. For examples consult Felix.)

SECUNDUS

Like Primus, Secundus seems to have been used first as a praenomen in the names of ordinary citizens. (Vid. CIL XIII 6899). It is found as a cognomen as early as the middle decades of the first century and was in general use among the legionaries into the third century. It is found evenly distributed among the provinces and the proportion of examples agrees, roughly speaking, with the whole number of names from the different regions of the Roman empire. One hundred and ten examples have been gathered; of these thirty-four come from the provinces embraced in CIL III, thirty-nine, from Africa, sixteen, from Germany; eleven, from Italy (including Gallia Narbonensis); six, from England; and three, from Spain.

The earliest group consists of seven members of the XV Apollinaris in Pannonia, perhaps all earlier than the year 63. Of these one was born in camp. Another came from Savaria. In Dalmatia where the XI Claudia was stationed between the year 42 and Vespasian's reign one finds two soldiers, one whose home was probably Iuvavum. A veteran of the VII Claudia in the same province in this period was C. Curatius Secundus from Augusta Troas. The group from Germany comprises almost wholly first century names. To the years from 70-100 belong C. Dannius Secundus from Vienna, T. Iulius Secundus from Firmum, and M. Gellius Secundus from Ara. The following soldiers were in service before the reign of Trajan: Q. Petilius Secundus from Milan and L. Cattonius Secundus from Virunum were soldiers stationed at Mainz. M. Apronius Secundus (Vid. CIL XIII 5201 for interpretation of inscription) from Lueus Augusti, Q. Bisius Secundus from Brixia, and two others whose homes are not known were enrolled in this period. Other undated examples of this cognomen occur in the case of men from Brixia and Dertona and may well belong to the early period.

In Africa the earliest instance of Seeundus is in the name of a man born at Theveste and serving at Lambaesis in the reign of Hadrian. About half of the African examples are dated and it can be seen that the cognomen was in use throughout the period which is covered by the military inscriptions from Lambaesis. The homes known are Carthage (3), Thysdrus (2), Cirta, Opitergium, Hadrumetum, and Uthinia. Three men were born in camp.

Secundus is found in the Danube region also in the second century and probably in the third where dated inscriptions are few. Emona and Falerio are the homes of two men bearing this cognomen. In England the only dated example is in the name of Iulius Secundus, a centurion about the year 71. Pollentia and Cremona are the homes of two legionaries in this province. One name from Spain is dated in the year 155. Another name is borne by a man from Albentibilis in Italy, the province from which most of the soldiers in the early period came.

Secundinus and Secundianus are cognomina in this list related to Secundus. The examples of these cognomina are later than the first century. The Danube provinces furnish a majority of the instances. For Aurelius Secundianus qui et Itrius vid. Chap. III, Double Cognomina. The cognomen 'Zeanus' is the reading of Wessely of a papyrus from Egypt written before the year 108. In a more recent publication of this papyrus (Studien zur Palaeographie und Papyruskunde XIV p. 3, Leipzig, 1914.)

the figure 2 has been omitted from the cognomen by the editor, Wessely.

SEVERUS.

The cognomen Severus, it will be recalled, is joined to Firmus, q. v., by E. Bormann, as one "zum Soldatendienst bestimmt." It is not found so frequently, however, as some others in this Chapter. Eighty-four examples have been collected; thirty-four were found in the provinces included in CIL III; sixteen, in Africa; thirteen, in Italy; eleven, in Germany; five each, in England and Spain.

The earliest instances are placed in the period before the year 42. These are M. Domitius Severus from Brixia, a soldier of the XIth legion in Dalmatia, and Babudius Severus, a centurion of the IXth legion in England. Twelve names with the cognomen Severus can be dated between the years 42 and 100. Several of these names are accompanied by the name of the town from which the men came, e. g., Aquae Statiellae, Ticinum, Verona, Aequum, Vienna, and Antipolis. Some other soldiers who are not much later than the first century indicate as their homes Arretium, Alba Pompeia, and Lucus Augusti.

During the second century Severus is found in the Danube provinces seven times in a military list about the year 134, and later, in the third century three times in an inscription (about the year 212). Other instances are scattered. In Egypt two cases of Severus can be dated in the years 194 and 240. The group from Africa attracts attention, because it is perhaps possible to see here the waning popularity of the cognomen. One centurion, Fundanius Severus, seems to belong to the latter half of the first century, when the III Augusta was in Theveste. Five men bearing this cognomen in Africa served during the reign of Hadrian and their homes are all outside of the province, Arado, Gazza, Gen—, Nicomedia, and Tolomais. In the reign of Antonius Pius there is a case of Severus borne by a man from Naragarra. Dyrrachium is the home of another Severus; the inscription is not dated. Hadrumetum and the camp (at Lambaesis) are the only towns in Africa mentioned in this group. In the later period, C. Iulius Severus belongs to the reign of Alexander Severus (222-235). This name is found in another inscription undated. The same man may be referred to in both.

C. Domitius Severus at Cartenna is a soldier of the XXII Primigenia; date uncertain, possibly third century. Three remain undated. In the name of Aristius Severus the cognomen is by no means certain. The province of Germany contributes examples of Severus in the first century and the name is still in use in the third. The same may be said of Italy.

Severinus is found six times in the inscriptions from the Danube provinces, probably all later than the first century. Severianus is represented by four scattered examples. Severius Severianus in Raetia (238-244) exhibits a feature of the later period; for other instances of this sort vid. Chap. III, Similarity between Nomen and Cognomen.

SILVANUS.

Thirty-four examples are included under this cognomen in the alphabetical list. Ten are found in the Danube provinces; seventeen in Africa; three in Italy; one each in Arabia, Spain, Germany, and England. The related cognomina, Silvinus and Silvester, are represented by three names each. Silvanus appears in the following names of the first century: L. Pomponius Silvanus, a soldier in the XIth legion, has been placed earlier than the year 42 by Van der Weerd, Études sur les trois Legions romaines du Bas-Danube, p. 228. C. Gavius Silvanus was primus pilus of the VIII Augusta at Taurini in the year 65. Several names belong to the period before the reign of Vespasian: L. Valerius Silvanus was a soldier of the VI Victrix in Spain; Titius Silvanus was a centurion of the XI Claudia in Dalmatia; and Sex. Iulius Silvanus served in the same province. Three other names can be dated in the second century and two are to be placed in the third. At Lambaesis ten of the seventeen examples can be dated in the years from 198 to the reign of Alexander Severus (222-235). Another soldier named Silvanus was born in camp. Carthage is the home of a soldier at Lambaesis and of another serving in Arabia. Iulius Silvanus on a stone at Lambaesis and Verecunda probably refers to the same man. Those undated in this and other places may be read from the alphabetical list.

Silvinus is the cognomen of two legionaries later than the principate of Septimius Severus. Silvester appears in one name of the first century and another of the third. The other examples can not be dated. For Silvanius Sylvester vid. Chapter III, Similarity between Nomen and Cognomen.

TERTIUS

For the use of Tertius as a praenomen vid. CIL XIII 6939. Twenty-two examples of the use of Tertius as a cognomen have been collected. Cognomina related to Tertius are Tertinus, Tertianus, Tertiolum, Tertullus, Tertullinus, and Tertullianus. The distribution of the examples of Tertius is as follows: From the inscriptions published in CIL III eight cases are taken; from inscriptions found in Africa, three; from those in Germany, nine; from those in Italy, two. Three examples appear in the names of men who are natives of Italian towns, while one of the examples in Italy is the cognomen of a man born in Pannonia. The homes in Italy named by legionaries bearing the cognomen Tertius are Cremona, Hasta, and Placentia. Virunum is the home of a man named Tertius serving in Mainz. The earliest date in this list for the use of Tertius is before the principate of Vespasian. The latest instances belong to the third century. Lambaesis is the home of Numitorius Tertius, who was a veteran probably about the year 200.

Of the cognate forms noted above Tertullus is the only one to appear on stones of the first century. Three of the six instances of its use as a cognomen belong to the period before the reign of Vespasian. L. Valerius Tertullus, whose home is Laus, was stationed at Mainz probably in the first century. Two names with the cognomen Tertullus at Lambaesis can be dated in the years 144 and 218. Tertullinus and Tertinus are recorded in inscriptions published in CIL III. Tertiolum is preserved in a name in Africa. Tertullianus is the cognomen of a centurion in England. Tertinus is represented by names on stones at Mainz and in Noricum.

URBANUS

Seventeen of the twenty-one examples of this cognomen come from Africa; two from Spain; one each from Pannonia and Germany. The last mentioned is the earliest; L. Cornelius Urbanus, a soldier of the XXI Rapax, was in Germany between the year 70 and the reign of Hadrian. In Africa the first dated name is Iulius Urbanus, borne by a centurion of the III Augusta in the year 162. Ten others can be dated from the years 198 to 218. Two men bearing this cognomen came from Cirta; one was born in camp. L. Alfidius Urbanus, from Spain, was a speculator of the VII Gemina about the year 200. Aelius Urbanus is the name in an inscription in Pannonia of the year 228.

Urbicus also appears as a legionary cognomen. An early spelling is found in the case of C. Vetienius Urbicus, a tubicen of the first century in Germany. From Carnuntum a stone reads Sextus Gellius Urbicus natione Cilix. Vienna is the home of D. Capienus Urbicus in England. Two other cases are undated. Urbicinus is found in the name of P. Aelius Urbicinus, a frumentarius at Rome.

VALENS AND VALENTINUS

The cognomen Valens or Vales, which has been listed separately for convenience, has been found in one hundred and fifty-two names. Related to this cognomen are Valentinus, Valetinus, and Valentianus. The geographical distribution of the examples of Valens or Vales is as follows: From the provinces the inscriptions of which are published in CIL III one hundred and eight instances have been taken; from Africa, twenty-four; from Italy, ten; from Germany, six; one from England, and one example from Spain, if in this instance Valens is the correct restoration of the cognomen, the first letters of which appear on the stone.

The earliest uses of Valens or Vales are found in inscriptions which can be dated in the second half of the first century. Ten examples can be assigned to this period. Two soldiers bearing this cognomen were born in Heraclea and Ara Agrippinensium. Mantua is the home of M. Sulpicius Valens, whose period of service may belong to the first century. During the second century the cognomen Valens was in frequent use in the Danube provinces. In a military list which was cut on the stone about the year 134 twelve instances of Valens are preserved. In a similar inscription in the year 155 this cognomen appears in nine names. Still later in a list of veterans at Viminacium in the year 195 nineteen men bear the cognomen Valens. In the last mentioned inscription the homes of the men are recorded with the names. The towns are all in Moesia. In other inscriptions in this region the homes of men bearing the cognomen Valens are Heraclea, Salona, Stobi, Ancyra, Amasia, and Amastris.

In Africa we find that several of the soldiers named Valens are not natives of that province. Eight men with this name are recorded in a list cut during the reign of Hadrian. (No other list at Lambaesis contains so many instances.) Of this number five men come from the East; their homes are Sidonia, Capitolis, Heliopolis, and Tolomais. Cyrene and Hippo are also indicated on this stone as the birth-places of two men bearing the cognomen Valens. C. Iulius Valens natio Surus was transferred from the III Gallica to the III Augusta. Three men possessing the name Valens found on stones in Africa belong to legions stationed in that region only for short intervals and probably these men were not born there. Africa, in comparison with other sections, has few instances of Valens used as a soldier's cognomen. Besides the cases in the principate of Hadrian, four others can be placed in the second century and four in the third. This decline would seem to indicate that this cognomen was not a popular one among the members of the III Augusta legion. Two of the men who bear it were enrolled from Theveste and two were born in camp.

Instances of Valens in the Danube provinces during the third century are not common, but this is largely due to the small number of datable inscriptions in this period. All the evidence, however, points to its frequent and continued use in this part of the empire. The latest example is dated in the year 295 on a papyrus at Oxyrhynchus.

The thirty examples of the cognomen Valentinus follow the general distribution of the use of the name Valens. Eighteen military inscriptions published in CIL III preserve the cognomen Valentinus; five instances are found in Africa; five in Italy; two in Germany. The two inscriptions from Germany may belong to the first century, and, if so, constitute the earliest use of Valentinus among the soldiers. The name on one stone is C. Vibullius Valentinus, whose home is Milan. Along the Danube the cognomen Valentinus is in use later than the first century. Dated examples range from the years 134 to 294. In Africa Valentinus is the cognomen of two men of native origin: viz., from Hadrumetum and Cirta. A centurion Valentinus of the secunda Flavia in Africa is later than Diocletian's reorganization of the army.

The following men deserve mention: L. Arbustius Valentinus, whose home is Cremona, and Salvinius Valentinus natus Carnunto are names of men serving in Italy. In Syria L. Philocalus Valentinus gives Gadara as his home. Valetinus and Valentinianus are cognomina found once in the names of legionaries.

VALERIANUS

Before speaking of Valerianus there are several examples of Valerius as a cognomen which must be noticed. The sixteen cases here collected are from the provinces included in CIL III, except for one each from Italy and England. Valerius was in origin a nomen and as a cognomen cannot be dated earlier than the second century. The earliest date of the appearance of this cognomen is in the year 155 in the name Flavius Valerius borne by a soldier of the XI Claudia in Moesia. One of the latest uses is in the name of a tesserarius of the same legion in Oxyrhynchus in the year 295. Another example not earlier than the reign of Diocletian is in the name Ulpius Valerius, borne by a speculator of the I Norica in Noricum. Nearly all of the instances of Valerius can be dated and these fall within the limits just mentioned. Ampelum may be the home of T. Flavius Valerius, a veteran at Viminacium in the year 195.

Thirty-four examples of Valerianus are presented here. Twenty-two cases come from the provinces included in CIL III; five were found in Africa; four in Italy; two in Germany; and one in Gallia Narbonensis. The earliest instance is not later than the reign of Vespasian. Other dated examples belong to the second and third centuries. The following cases deserve mention: D. Valerius Valerianus, whose home was Vienna, was a soldier at Rome. T. Flavius Valerianus, whose home was Oescus in Moesia, was a frumentarius in Rome. In the same city in the year 208, L. Domitius Valerianus was in service from Capitolias in Syria. Antioch is the home of a tubicen bearing the cognomen Valerianus, who became a veteran at Alexandria in the year 194.

Valerinus and Valerio appear also as the cognomina of legionaries on stones in Dacia and at Lyons. Balerianus is, doubtless, a variant spelling of Valerianus.

VERECUNDUS

The twenty-two examples of Verecundus here collected are well scattered. The Danube provinces and Germany contribute seven each; four were found on Italian soil; two at Lambaesis; one each in Spain and Syria. Several instances of the use of this cognomen belong to the first century. D. Miscenius Verecundus was a centurion of the XV Apollinaris at Carnuntum, probably before that legion left for the East in the year 63. Caecilius Verecundus, a centurion in Dalmatia, D. Iunius Verecundus and Seionius Verecundus, centurions at Mainz, were in service in the early period. In the first century L. Valerius Verecundus is thought to have come from Vienna. Vercellae furnished a Verecundus to the XXI Rapax probably in the first century. C. Iulius Verecundus, who adds Traianensis, is dated about the year 100, a soldier at Bonn. Savaria and Sarmizegetusa are homes near the Danube of two men bearing this cognomen. C. Mettius Verecundus came from Alba Pompeia, and Q. Moneius Verecundus adds Narbonensis. L. Campanius Verecundus belongs to the tribe Pollia. At Lambaesis Iulius Verecundus was in service during the reign of Alexander Severus (222-235). (This case is by far the latest of Verecundus as a soldier's cognomen.)

VERUS

The cognomen Verus has been found in thirty-three legionary names. Cognomina related to Verus are Verissimus and Verinus. The distribution of the examples of Verus is as follows: Fifteen have been taken from the provinces covered by CIL III; eight from Africa; five from inscriptions published in CIL XIII; three from Italy; and two from England.

The earliest instance is in the name Licinius Verus from an inscription in Egypt cut during the principate of Augustus. At least seven examples can be dated in the latter half of the first century. Lucus Augusti, Forum Iulii, and Vienna are the homes of men bearing the cognomen Verus not later than the year 70. Dated cases of the second and third centuries in the Danube provinces are found but not frequently. Dertona is the home of C. Cornelius Verus, who served in Pannonia later than the first century. Ammaedara is the birth-place of a soldier of the I Adiutrix. This inscription is probably to be dated later than the middle of the second century when this legion was in Africa. Ammaedara is also the home of two men bearing this cognomen at Lambaesis. One legionary served during the reign of Alexander Severus (222-235). The other has the same name and possibly the same man is referred to on both stones. Cirta and the camp are given as the homes of two more men at Lambaesis named Verus. Verinus has been found as a soldier's cognomen in nine inscriptions; all appear to be later than the first century. Cemenelum is the home of L. Gratius Verinus. One example of Verissimus is noted in the name of a veteran, whose home is Ratiaria in Moesia. The inscription found in the same province was cut in the year 195.

VICTOR AND VICTORINUS

The cognomen Victor would seem to fill all the requirements of a suitable cognomen for soldiers and it causes us no surprise to find that it is one of the most frequent cognomina. One hundred and sixty-eight examples have been collected. The cognomina Victorinus, Victorianus, and Victorius are also used by the soldiers and will be mentioned later. The distribution of the evidence showing the use of Victor as a cognomen is as follows: Eighteen cases are taken from the provinces included in CIL III; one hundred and twenty-five come from Africa; fourteen are found in the provinces included in CIL XIII; and six were recovered from inscriptions found in Italy; two each, in England and Spain.

The earliest and perhaps the only use of the first century is in the name of C. Iulius Victor from Hispalis, a soldier of the X Gemina. Lucius Valerius Victor, a soldier of the XXIIId legion at Mainz, is not certainly of the first century because of the omission of the word "Primigenia" in citing the legion. The group of Victors from the Danube region range from about the year 134 to the third century. Three men named Victor are found in the East, and one centurion bearing the cognomen Victor was stationed in Egypt in the interval between the years 120 and 140. Aelius Victor from Trimontium is the only veteran with this cognomen in the list in the year 195 found at Viminacium which contained Valens so many times. C. Castricius Victor gives Comum as his birth-place; the inscription is undated. An eques in Dacia bearing the cognomen Victor came from Iader. The stone was cut later than the reign of Trajan.

If we turn to the large number from Africa, an examination of the cases of Victor borne by men enrolled in the III Augusta shows that about seventy can be dated. The earliest use is perhaps in the name of a veteran preserved at Thamugadi, possibly before the legion moved its camp to Lambaesis during the reign of Hadrian. In the first military list at the new camp, when Hadrian was emperor, L. Antonius Victor from Scytopolis is recorded. From this time until the year 275 (the end of Aurelian's reign), the cognomen Victor enjoyed great popularity. In the year 218 nineteen duplarii bore this cognomen. The small number of centurions is noticeable; only three possessed this name in the III Augusta. To name the homes from which Victors came to join the legion at Lambaesis is to mention many of the towns of Africa; thirteen have been preserved. Seven men named Victor were born in camp.

For other scattered cases of Victor outside of Africa consult the alphabetical list. All except one of the dated uses of Victor in Germany belong to the third century. One name found in Italy is borne by a man of African origin—Q. Cornelius Victor nat Afer.

Victorinus (forty-eight examples), strangely, does not follow the same development as Victor among the legions. The Danube provinces lead with twenty cases; fourteen come from Africa; eight from Germany; three from England; two from Rome; and one from Genava. Of the first century there is one instance in the name of a centurion of the VI Victrix in Germany; L. Titennius Victorinus from Bononia was a soldier in Germany between the reigns of Vespasian and Trajan. In the Danube region Victorinus appears later than the first century. Aelius Victorinus, a soldier in Moesia in the year 155, is the earliest name to which an exact date can be assigned. M. Aebutius Victorinus from Poetovio is a centurion of seven legions after the reign of Trajan at Ancyra. A stone cut in the third century at Rome records the name of a man in service there in the cohorts, formerly a legionary: viz., Aurelius Victorinus, who adds natione Dacisca regione Sardica.

In Africa one notes T. Flavius Victorinus from Damascus at Lambaesis during the reign of Hadrian as the earliest soldier to bear this cognomen here. Sex. Vettius Victorinus, born in camp, was a veteran about the year 198. Six examples can be dated in the third century. Besides a Victorinus born in camp, Siscia and Traianopolis, both in Europe, are mentioned as the homes of men bearing this cognomen. In Germany the dated cases of Victorinus belong to the third century.

Victorianus appears in the name C. Atilius Livius Victorianus borne by a veteran at Lambaesis. For the double nomen vid. Chap. III, Double Cognomina. Victorius is the cognomen in an inscription from Dacia and in two at Lambaesis; one of these is dated in the reign of Aurelian (270-275).

VITALIS

Sixty-nine instances of the cognomen Vitalis have been collected. One example of the spelling Vitales has been found. Vitealis affords another variant. The cognomen Vitalianus is preserved on one stone in a soldier's name. Twenty cases of Vitalis come from the Danube provinces; twenty-nine from Africa; ten from the provinces included in CIL XIII; five from England; four from Italy; and one from Spain.

The period between the years 42 and 70 is the earliest date to which any instances can be assigned. The cases in point are: C. Octavius Vitalis from Brixia, a veteran in Dalmatia, Aurelius Vitalis, a veteran in Moesia, and L. Celerinius Vitalis of the IX Hispana in England. Ti. Claudius Vitalis was a centurion of several legions at Rome during the reign of Domitian. Those who come from Italian towns are generally early and Vitalis is known from Blaera, Hasta, and Ticinum. Interamnia is the home of a primus pilus of the III Augusta, Ti. Claudius Vitalis at Lambaesis; the date is uncertain. In Moesia and Pannonia Vitalis is found throughout the second century and into the third. In the year 195 at Viminacium three veterans born in camp and one from Ratiaria bear this cognomen. In Africa Vitalis is found during the second and third centuries as a name for legionaries of African origin. Four were born in camp. Another gives Lambaesis as his home. Ammaedara, Carthage, Simitthus, Theveste, and Tipasa also furnished men bearing this cognomen to the III Augusta. The earliest date in Germany for Vitalis is in the year 186; four other cases can be assigned to the first half of the third century. One instance from England has been mentioned above. Another is dated in the year 191. Iulius Vitalis (undated) adds after his name natione Belga.

NOTE—The general proportionate distribution of the inscriptions among the provinces will be recalled from the Foreword at the beginning of this chapter: viz., about one-third from the provinces of which the inscriptions are published in CIL III, slightly over one-third from the territory of Africa except Egypt, and the remainder from other parts of the Roman Empire. This distribution makes the normal percentage in these different regions about 33.

CHAPTER TWO

CLASSIFICATION OF COGNOMINA

FOREWORD

A few words of explanation may make clear the method which has been employed of classifying the cognomina in the present collection. There are three general classes which in turn permit of several subdivisions. In the first class will be found cognomina arranged according to form and meaning: i. e., adjectives, nouns, and diminutives to which sections dealing with names connected the names of divinities and the names of emperors have been added. The great majority of the words in these groups are of Roman or Italian origin. The second class is composed of those cognomina which have similar endings: e. g., -a, -ianus, etc. Here almost as many names of foreign as of Roman origin will be found. The third class is entirely devoted to words of foreign origin: i. e., Celtic, Greek, Thracian, etc.

It will be observed that a name may appear in more than one section of the classification. E. g., a Punic name ending in -o will be noted in two classes, a noun ending in -a will also be recorded in two classes, and so on. The cognomen Martialis offers a case in point. First, it is considered with those adjectives suitable in meaning to serve as the cognomina of soldiers. It may also refer to a birthday and at the same time must be mentioned in the group of names connected with the names of divinities. Finally it is listed with the cognomina which end in -lis.

In each section the cognomina involved are listed alphabetically and some general remarks concerning the significance of that particular group of names and the earliest names are made. The most noteworthy names receive especial mention. In each section, however, the details in regard to the individual names must be sought in the proper place in the large alphabetical list. It has been impossible to attempt any complete repetition of the data available there.

In the classification of adjectives considerable freedom has been exercised in the assignment of names under each heading. Further classification might be thought advisable although it is believed that the arrangement adopted is reasonable and convenient.

There are 1333 different cognomina in this collection. This number is computed on the basis that a variant spelling: e. g., Clemes for Clemens forms two distinct cognomina. This separation has been adhered to throughout and will be found to make the study of the names in the alphabetical list a simpler matter.

Cognomina have been arranged in the following sections.

CLASS I

- A. Adjectives used as Cognomina.
  - A 1. Adjectives denoting qualities suited to men in military service.
  - A 2. Adjectives denoting physical characteristics.
  - A 3. Adjectives denoting mental or moral characteristics.
  - A 4. Adjectives with geographical or racial significance.
  - A 5. Numeral adjectives.
  - A 6. Adjectives relating to birthdays.
  - A 7. Participle adjectives.
  - A 8. Adjectives in the comparative and superlative forms.
  - A 9. Adjectives not elsewhere classified.

ADJECTIVES USED AS COGNOMINA

About four hundred, or nearly one-third of the whole number of different cognomina, are in the form of adjectives. These have been subdivided into several related groups as shown by the headings indicated in the foreword to this chapter. The practice of using an adjective as a cognomen is observed in the earliest names of soldiers which have come down to us, and it is also widespread, for fully half of the total number of names in the alphabetical list contains a cognomen in the form of an adjective.

ADJECTIVES DENOTING QUALITIES SUITED TO MEN IN MILITARY SERVICE

Following the suggestion of Bormann (Vid. Introduction), who described the cognomina Firmus and Severus as names suited to men in military service, the present section is made up of a number of cognomina which seem properly to belong under such a heading. These are:

Acer	Constans	Fidus	Pervincus
Acutus	Costa	Fidelis	Promptus
Audax	Dexter	Firmus	Repentinus
Audeus	Efficax	Fortis	Robustus
Bellicus	Exupcreus	Fortunatus	Severus
Castrensis	Faustus	Laevus	Tenax
Catus	Felicissimus	Martialis	Torquatus
Celer	Felix	Militaris	Valens
Certus	Ferox	Militio	Velox
Classicus	Festus	Pertinax

This list of suitable names may be increased by other cognomina not adjectives. The noun Victor is pre-eminently a proper cognomen for a soldier. Vindex also deserves mention here. Names of military offices appear as cognomina, Pequarius, Polio, Princeps, Tribunus, and Veteranus. Ballista and Castellus are not out of place in a soldier's name. Some names of Greek origin are suitable for use in the name of a soldier; these are Achilleus, Alexander, Anicetus, Deiotarus, and Nicomachus.

Under this heading are found several of the most popular cognomina: viz., Faustus, Felix, Festus, and Fortunatus, the names of good omen common in Africa, Celer, Firmus, Severus and Valens, the names of valor which prevail in the Danube region, Martialis and Victor, propitious names for the soldier also frequent in Africa. Some other names seem to us equally suitable for the legionary, Bellicus, Fortis, and Pervincus, but these have not come down to the present day in such large numbers as those just mentioned.

Several of the names in this group are found as cognomina in the first century. Among the earliest to be used are Celer, Firmus, Severus, and Valens. The names Castrensis, Militaris, Militio, and Torquatus are later than the first century.

The cognomen Audeus is found in an inscription from Dacia. The full name is P. Aelius Septimius Audeus qui et Maximus. (For the supernomen vid. Chap. III, Double Cognomina.) The spelling on the stone is Audeo and so Lambertz (Glotta IV p. 132) reads this form as a nominative. The Index Cognominum of CIL III adopts the form Audeus. The double nomen Aelius Septimius is not frequent (vid. Chapter III l. c. and cf. Mucapor and Romanus). This inscription is later than the reign of Trajan. On the use of the cognomen Fidelis among Roman citizens vid. Kubitschek, Jahres. Wien. 1899

Beibl, 73. The name Constans appears also as Costas and the spelling Costa is restored to Constans.

ADJECTIVES DENOTING PHYSICAL CHARACTERISTICS

The following cognomina are adjectives which denote physical characteristics:

Albus	Flaceus	Magnus	Rufus
Aprinus	Flacus	Maior	Salutaris
Aquilus	Flavus	Masculus	Silo
Balbus	Flaus	Masgilus	Taurinus
Barosus	Florus	Maximus	Tauriscus
Bellus	Fuscus	Mutilus	Vegetus
Calvus	Gracilis	Niger	Venustus
Candidus	Longus	Paetus	Virilis
Celsus	Lucidus	Paulus	Vitalis
Crispus	Macellus	Paullus
Equinus	Macer	Piscinus

Among this number are several cognomina which appear also in Chap. I; Candidus, Crispus, Fuscus, Maximus, Niger, Rufus, and Vitalis. The prevalence of these seven names bears witness to the frequent use of cognomina of this kind in the name of men in the legions. Celsus, Florus, Longus, and Magnus have been recorded in more than ten names each. Several cognomina are formed from the names of animals, Aprinus, Equinus, Taurinus, and Tauriscus, cf. Caprarius. Piscinus may be mentioned in this connection. Adjectives referring to size are Celsus, Longus, Macer, Marcellus, Magnus (Maior and Maximus), and Paulus. Adjectives indicating color are Albus, Candidus, Flavus, Fuscus, Lucidus, Niger, and Rufus. Certain peculiarities of the body are denoted by the words Balbus, Calvus, Crispus, Flaccus, Mutilus, Paetus, and Silo. Bellus, Gracilis, and Venustus point to attractive qualities.

Cognomina of this kind are used in the early period by the soldiers. Among the earliest legionary cognomina which have been preserved are Celsus, Magnus, Niger, Rufus, Longus, and Flaccus. The use here of the words "physical characteristics" is not by any means intended to convey the impression that the man who bore the cognomen received it because he had the particular physical peculiarity which the cognomen indicates. Such a name as Rufus can scarcely have retained its physical significance. But at this distance it is impossible to determine how far these names were suited to their bearers. It seems useful, however, to have the cognomina of this kind brought together.

On Mutilus vid. comm. in CIL XIII 8591 cf. 2583. This cognomen is found also in Frontinus, Strat. 1. 5, 17 and Livy, Epit. 89. On Paulus vid. Schulze, Lat. Eigennamen p. 508. Masgilus is perhaps related to Masculus and for that reason has been listed with it.

ADJECTIVES DENOTING MENTAL OR MORAL CHARACTERISTICS

The following adjectives which denote mental or moral characteristics are found as cognomina in the names of Roman soldiers:

Aequus	Dignissimus	Mansuetus	Securus
Aequos	Disertus	Melior	Sedatus
Amabilis	Dubius	Mellitus	Sedulus
Amenus	Facilis	Memor	Serenus
Apricosus	Festivus	Moderatus	Serranos
Asper	Frugi	Modestus	Simplex
Avidus	Garrulus	Nobilis	Sterceius
Bibulus	Genialis	Pius	Suavis
Bonus	Gratus	Placentus	Tacitus
Bonosus	Honestus	Placidus	Verax
Carus	Hospitalis	Probus	Verecundus
Castus	Inuocens	Prudens	Verus
Clarus	Iucundus	Pudens	Verissimus
Clemens	Iustus	Quietus
Clemes	Laetus	Respectus
Dignus	Lepidus	Sanctus

Of the sixty-one names here listed six have been used frequently enough to come under the heading of popular cognomina: viz., Castus, Clemens, Iustus, Pudens, Verecundus, and Verus. Mansuetus, Modestus, and Probus are represented by ten or more examples.

As in the case of adjectives denoting physical characteristics the literal meaning of the adjectives under this heading can not be pressed closely in every case. In some names, however, we may feel sure that the name was in some way suited to the men who bore them. Sterceius is certainly an undesirable name and was probably applied with full knowledge of its meaning. Asper, Avidus, Bibulus, and Garrulus may well have been bestowed in disparagement of a soldier. In contrast to these names of an uncomplimentary nature, the adjectives indicating favorable qualities are many and widely scattered. Cognomina of this kind appear during the first century in the names of men enrolled in the legions. For these details and others consult the alphabetical list. The Greek name Asmenus, Aristo, and Hilarus should be mentioned here on account of their agreement in meaning with other names in this section. On the name Frugi it is interesting to note what Cicero (Tusc. 3, 8, 16 seq) has to say in regard to the application of this name to L. Piso. The cognomen Clarus has been noted in the names of African legionaries only.

ADJECTIVES WITH GEOGRAPHICAL OR RACIAL SIGNIFICANCE

Adjectives which contain geographical or racial indications are often used among the legionaries as cognomina. The following names have been found:

Africanus	Cilicianus	Italicus	Reticus
Africus	Cretianus	Italus	Romanus
Albanus	Creticus	Laco	Romulus
Aquileiensis	Curia	Latinus	Sabinus
Arabus	Curta	Laurentinus	Saloninus
Aretinus	Etruscus	Lavinus	Sarmatius
Aternus	Eufratanus	Ligus	Sausa
Atticus	Faventinus	Lucanus	Soranus
Atticinus	Florentinus	Lugudunolus	Suebus
Atticianus	Gaetulicus	Macedo	Surus
Aurassus	Getulicus	Marsus	Syriacus
Aventinus	Galicanus	Maurinus	Siriacus
Britto	Gallicus	Maurus	Tarquiniensis
Bruttianus	Germanus	Moesicus	Telesinus
Camerinus	Geta	Noricus	Teurnicus
Campanus	Iadrias	Panno	Thevestinus
Campanianus	Hispanus	Parthicus	Tevestinus
Capetolinus	Ispanus	Ponticus	Thubunius
Capitolinus	Hispelo	Praenestinus	Tuscus
Caudinus	Hister	Raeticus	Umbrianus
Celtiber	Iadestinus

Several other adjectives also contain the idea of locality and may be mentioned in this connection. These are Agrinus, Barbarus, Gentilis, Marinus, Maritimus, Montanus, (Muntanus), Percgrinus, Provincialis, Rusticus, Silvanus, Silvinus, Silvester, Urbanus, Urbicus, and Vicanus. The names Germanus, Sabinus, Silvanus, and Urbanus are found with some frequency and have been discussed in Chap. I. Romanus appears as a cognomen in nineteen names.

Names of this kind which can be dated during the first century are Etruscus (before the year 42), Hispelo (before the year 43), Laco (37–41), Hister, Maurinus, and Tuscus (42–70), Romulus (before the year 62), Tarquiniensis (before the year 63), Albanus, Campanus, Celtiber, and Italicus (before the year 70); Atticinus, Iadestinus, and Lugudunolus belong to the first century.

The natural conclusion regarding the names containing geographical indications is that the names constitute a reference to the particular regions from which came the men who bear them. There appear to be some exceptions to this supposition and these may be due to the fact that the name was employed without conscious reflection upon its literal meaning. The following cases throw some light on the usage of "geographical" cognomina. Africanus and Africus are the cognomina of men in service at Lambaesis. Capetolinus is borne by a centurion whose home is Capetolias. Celtiber is the cognomen of a centurion in Spain. Cilicianus is found on a stone in Syria. Moesicus is the cognomen of a veteran in Moesia Inferior. Iadestinus is borne by a soldier whose home is Iader. Raeticus is found in Raetia and also in England. Noricus is found in England as well. Panno and Parthicus are taken from inscriptions in Germany. Gallicus and Laurentinus are found in Africa. Gætulicus appears in Africa and England. C. Iulius Lugudunolus, a soldier in Africa, was born at Augustodunum. L. Publicius Florentinus was born at Lambaesis. Aurelius Germanus adds natione Dacus to his name. Theveste is the home of M. Valerius Aquileiensis, cf. Chap. III, Double Cognomina, for the supernomen Aquensis. Cuiculum, also in Africa, is the birthplace of C. Iulius Arabus. Cirta, in the same province, is the home of Mummius Atticus. M. Aurelius Romanus was born at Antioch, Caecilius Romanus at Tipasa, and M. Novellius Romanus at Milan. In these cases the men may have become citizens early in life or perhaps through pride in the citizenship of their fathers they took the name Romanus. The reasons are not so apparent for the use of Sabinus, which has been noted as the cognomen of men born in Caesarea Augusta, Nicomedia, Ratiaria, Carthage, Amasium, Narbo, Forum Brentanum, and Spain. Germanus is read as the cognomen of a soldier at Lambaesis who was born in camp. M. Cocceius Germanus, a soldier in Arabia, had in addition a native name, Ἀουεῖδος. Gaius Scius Atticus, an optio in the VIth legion at Hierapolis, was also known as Μόσχας Μειλήσιος. In the case of a third supernomen, Nonius Saloninus qui et signo Dalmatis, there seems to be a connection between the two names. The cognomen Salominus indicates the town Salonae and the supernomen Dalmatis is obviously a reference to the province Dalmatia in which Salonae is located.

The name Aurassus is connected with the name of a mountain in Numidia, cf. Chap. III, Double Cognomina, for an example of a supernomen Aurassius. Curia and Curta are names of places in Pannonia. Sausa may be related to Sau, the name of a river in Pannonia. Soranus is perhaps from Sora.

Romanus as a cognomen in the names of legionaries can not be dated earlier than the second century. Nineteen examples have been noted. Africa and the Danube provinces, including Dalmatia, afford seven examples each. Germany and England contribute two each and Italy has one soldier's name with this cognomen. Three of the five examples of Ponticus are found in a single inscription in Moesia which is dated earlier than the reign of Marcus Aurelius. One other instance is noted in Moesia and a soldier in Egypt in the year 90 has this cognomen. His home is outside of Egypt.

A list of this kind, i. e., cognomina formed from the names of towns and provinces, may well be used to supplement the data from inscriptions in regard to the birth-place of men in the legions.

A few names have a second cognomen which contains a reference to the home of the man who bears it. These are discussed in Chap. III, Double Cognomina. The "geographical" cognomina are Ἀθηναῖος, Cemenelensis, Iguvinus, Marrucinus, Narbonensis, and Vicetinus.

NUMERAL ADJECTIVES

All the numeral adjectives except those for "eighth" and "ninth," are used among the soldiers as cognomina. Primus (Protus), Secundus, Tertius, Quartus, Quintus (Cointus), Sextus (Sexstus), Septimus, and Decimus are represented in the present collection by one or more instances. These are accompanied by diminutives and derivatives which may be consulted in the alphabetical list. Secundus, Primus, and Tertius have been found most frequently and some discussion of these cognomina appears in Chap. I. Septimus and Sextus are used least. The use of Primus, Secundus, Tertius, Quintus, Sextus, and Decimus as praenomina is noted in a later section. Quintus and Sextus, the latter particularly, seem to have been used longer as praenomina and for that reason their employment as cognomina falls later than the first century. Primus, Secundus, and Tertius are found on several stones cut in the first century. Numerus appears as a cognomen in the name of a soldier serving in Pannonia.

ADJECTIVES RELATING TO BIRTHDAYS

Cognomina in the form of adjectives which relate to birthdays are found in the following names: The first group, with the exception of the first word in it, is made up of the names of the months. Kalendinus (Kalandinus), Ianuarius, Martialis, Aprilis, Iunius, Iulius, Augustalis, October, and December. The names of the second group refer to seasons or festivals, Natalis, Brumasius, Capratinus, Cerialis, Cerealis, Liberalis, Neptunalis, Quirinalis, Κυρινάλιος, Saturnalis, Saturnilus, Saturninus, and Terminalis. For a recent discussion of these names and others of similar import not appearing in this collection vid. Gottanka, Epigraphische Beiträge, Augsburg, 1912. The most common names in this class are Ianuarius, Martialis, and Saturninus, which have been discussed in Chap. I. These names are especially abundant in Africa and there are doubtless other reasons for their widespread popularity in that province than a reference to birthdays. These names are mentioned again in the section relating to the names of divinities. Consult further Chap. III, The Cognomina of African Legionaries, and for Martialis, Section One of this chapter. Iulius and Iunius are more strictly nomina, vid. Cognomina ending in -ius. The word Liberalis is also connected with some other idea than that of the god. The fourteen examples extend from the period before the reign of Claudius to that of Aurelian (270-275). It is interesting to note that a man whose name is Cerealis enjoyed the office of frumentarius at Rome for his legion and possibly this occupation would serve to account for his cognomen.

PARTICIPIAL ADJECTIVES

The following adjectives in participial form appear as cognomina in the names of men in the legions:

Acceptus	Dubitatus	Optatus	Restitutus
Amandus	Emeritus	Oriens	Restutus
Ampliatus	Exoratus	Pacatus	Rogatus
Citus	Extricatus	Potens	Sequens
Cogitatus	Exuperatus	Potitus	Servatus
Collatus	Fruendus	Praesens	Servandus
Concessus	Frunitus	Privatus	Spectatus
Constitutus	Honoratus	Probatus	Speratus
Crescens	Impetratus	Processus	Statutus
Cupitus	Insequens	Profuturus	Stratus
Datus	Libens	Promotus	Successus
Decoratus	Mandatus	Quadratus	Timens
Dolens	Meritus	Cutratus
Donatus	Obsequens	Renuntiatus

Of this number, thirty-nine are in the form of past participles, ten in the form of present participles, three in gerundive form, and one seems to be in the form of a future participle. The names found most frequently are Crescens, Datus, Donatus, Emeritus, Honoratus, Optatus, and Rogatus. Some explanation of their popularity in Africa is given in Chap. III, The Cognomina of African Legionaries, vid. also Chap. I. The uses of these seven names number two hundred and seventy-eight and all but fifty-nine have been noted in African inscriptions. More instances of Crescens have been found outside of Africa than of any other of the seven just mentioned. The remaining cognomina in the form of present participles appear outside of Africa. Other cognomina in this group which are found in this province only are Ampliatus, Collatus, Concessus (four examples), Exoratus, Extricatus (seven examples), Meritus, Potitus, Privatus, Processus (six examples), Profuturus, and Renuntiatus, cf. Caligatus, Chap. III, Double Cognomina. In ten other names one or more examples come from Africa. Omitting the present participial form, African inscriptions contribute all or part of the examples in twenty-seven out of forty-three cognomina in participial form. For the significance of this form and its prevalence in Africa, vid. Chap. III, The Cognomina of African Legionaries.

The names in this group which can be dated in the first century are Servatus, Quadratus, Constitutus, Libens, and Oriens. Emeritus appears in one case with the spelling Aemeritus. For an early cognomen, Relatus, see the Addition to the introductory note to the Alphabetical List.

ADJECTIVES IN THE COMPARATIVE AND SUPERLATIVE FORMS

A small number of cognomina take the form of the adjective in the comparative and superlative degrees. These are Maior, Melior, Prior, Dignissimus, Felicissimus, Maximus, Postumus, Proximus, and Verissimus. The name Aristo appears among the cognomina of Greek origin. Maximus is the only one of this group to attain a wide use as a cognomen, vid. discussion in Chap. I. Maior appears as the cognomen of a soldier whose period of service falls in the first century. The other dated instances are later than this century. Postumus is recorded as the cognomen of a centurion serving in Dalmatia in the period between the year 42 and the reign of Vespasian. All the other dated examples of this cognomen and of the others in this group are later than the first century. With the exception of Maximus, no superlative form gained popularity among the men in the legions. The formation of cognomina by the addition of endings such as -ianus to the stem seems to have been preferred to the use of the superlative. Primitius would seem to be the comparative form of the adverb primitus; both are legionary cognomina.

ADJECTIVES NOT ELSEWHERE CLASSIFIED

To avoid the unnecessary multiplication of classes all adjectives not hitherto classified are arranged here in three groups. The first contains such words as have in them a reference to time: Aeternalis, Annalis, Avitus, Cordus, Iuvenis, Iuvenalis, Maturus, Perpetuus, Primigenius, Primitivos, (Primitus and Primitius), Priscus, Saecularis, Senilis, Superstes, and Vetus. Priscus has already been discussed in Chap. I. Cordus, Iuvenis, Perpetuus, Priscus, and Senilis appear in names borne by men in service during the first century.

A second group is composed of words which indicate relationship or birth: Consors, Fraternus, Geminus, cf. Didymus, Gemellus, Ingenuus (Ingenus), Maternus, Paternus, Propinquus (Propincus and Prupincus). Ingenuus is found in several names and a discussion of these occurs in Chap. I. Cf. Liberalis and Eugenus. Gemellus receives some attention in the section devoted to Diminutives. Names which appear as early as the first century are Geminus, Gemellus, Ingenuus, Maternus, and Paternus.

There is a certain number of adjectives, which have been found as cognomina, the meaning of which does not permit insertion under any of the headings already given. These are Catervarius, Civilis, Communis, Dativus, Fatalis (Fatales), Fructuosus, Hibernus, Leonatus, Peculiaris, Reginus, Reginalis, Salutus, Scaenicus, Similis, Solus, and Superus. Several will be found mentioned in the sections devoted to cognomina which have certain endings. For comment on the name in which Scaenicus appears vid. Chap. III, Double Cognomina. Reginus can be dated in the first century; the other names are later. This is the only cognomen of this group to be found in as many as four names.

NOUNS USED AS COGNOMINA

The following list presents the nouns which have been found as cognomina in the names of Roman legionaries.

Adiutor	Congius	Mercator	Senecio
Adventus	Kορυoūς	Messor	Sera
Aedilis	Derisor	Mica	Siliquarius
Agricola	Dosso	Mucco	Socellus
Aper	Elepans	Naso	Sodalis
Aquila	Emporus	Natulus	Stella
Aquilo	Faber	Nepos	Taurus
Arator	Favor	Numerus	Tiro
Artemo	Flaminalis	Pastor	Tribunus
Auster	Fronto	Paterculus	Turbo
Baculus	Fructus	Pequarius	Tutor
Ballista	Gallus	Pietas	Ursus
Bucco	Cf. Callus	Polio	Ursaris
Buculus	Gaulus	Porcellus	Ursulus
Capito	Homullus	Princeps	Verna
Caprarius	Omuncio	Procus	Vernuleus
Capreolus	Hospes	Pupus	Veteranus
Castellus	Laenas	Questor	Viator
Catulus	Lappus	Reditus	Victor
Censor	Leo	Regulus	Vindex
Cicatricula	Lucus	Rixula	Vinitor
Cilo	Lupus	Sacerdos	Vitulus
Colonus	Lupulus	Salinator
Conductor	Lupulus	Scaena

The ninety-three cognomina in this group involve four hundred and thirty-nine names, of which Fronto and Victor constitute 47 per cent. These two names are discussed in Chap. I. Capito is next in order of frequency and barely escapes a place in Chap. I. (Vid. comment on this below.)

Nouns were early employed as cognomina and among this group of names several belong to the first half of the first century Aquila, Baculus, Castellus, Salinator, and Viator. Others of the latter half of this century are Adventus, Aper, Arator, Ballista, Bucco, Buculus, Capito (four examples are dated in this period), Cicatricula, Fronto, Leo, Nepos, Pastor, Taurus, Tiro, and Vindex. The following diminutives are employed as cognomina: Bucus, Capreolus, Castellus, Catulus, Cicatricula, Homullus, Omuncio, Lupulus, Natulus, Patrculus, Porcellus, Regulus, Rixula, Socellus, Ursulus, Vernuleus, and Vitulus. For these and other diminutives vid. next section.

Several groups of related nouns deserve mention. Some words denote military offices and are to be expected as the cognomina of soldiers. Pequarius and Polio, borne by men born in camp, Princeps, and Questor have been found in Africa. Tribunus appears in an inscription in Germany. Veteranus is the name on a stone found at Dertona. Tiro and Pupus are suitable names for newly enrolled members of a legion. Castellus and Ballista are not inappropriate names for soldiers. Many nouns indicate an office or occupation other than military, Aedilis, Censor, Viator; Agricola, Arator, Caprarius, Colonus, Conductor, Messor, Pastor, and Vinitor; Faber, Mercator, Emporus, Salinator, Sacerdos, and Flaminalis. Adiutor, Tutor, Vindex, and, pre-eminently, Victor, are suitable names for soldiers. Several names of animals appear as cognomina: Aper, Bucus, Capreolus, Catulus, Elepans, Leo, Lupus (Greek, Lycus), Porcellus, Taurus, Ursus, Ursulus, and Vitulus. Aquila and Gallus are the only names of birds adopted by the soldiers as cognomina. Aquilo and Auster are the names of winds which are employed as cognomina. Adventus, Reditus, Favor, and Pietas are abstract nouns. Names of objects are Baculus, Congius, Κορνοῦς, Gaulus, Laenas, Lappus (probably connected with Lappa, which is also used as a cognomen, though not in this collection), Lucus, Mica, Seaena, Sera, and Stella. Cicatricula seems clearly to point to a personal feature of the man who bore

it. Mucco (connected with muccus) and Derisor are doubtless uncomplimentary names. Bucco, Cilo, Dosso (from dorso), Fronto, and Naso refer to parts of the body. Hospes, Socellus, and Sodalis are desirable names for men in any occupation.

The cognomen Capito has been found in nineteen names. The spelling Capiton appears in one case. Ten instances are taken from the countries the inscriptions of which are published in CIL III. African inscriptions contribute three. Four examples have been found on Italian soil. One use of the cognomen is recorded on stones in England and Spain. The first century instances of Capito have been referred to above. Aprum is the home of a soldier in England during this period. Hadrumetum is recorded as the birthplace of C. Iulius Capito. In this inscription the reading Capito (Bull. Archeol. 1905 p. 235) is a correction for Cupitus, the former reading (VIII 18068). A. Considius Capito records his lineage to the second generation. The inscription was cut later than the reign of Trajan.

DIMINUTIVES USED AS COGNOMINA

Cognomina in the form of diminutives appear among the names of soldiers in the following words:

Auricullus	Gemellus	Nampulus	Rixula
Antulus	Gudullus	Natulus	Satullus
Buculus	Homullus	Nigel(l)io	Socellus
Capreolus	Omuncio	Novellus	Tertiolum
Castellus	Lugudunolus	Paterculus	Tertullus
Catulus	Lupulus	Porcellus	Titullus
Cicatricula	Macellus	Primul(l)us	Ursulus
Datullus	Marcellus	Proculus	Vernuleus
Eppillus	Marculus	Quintilus	Vindilus
Fabullus	Masculus	Quintulus
Faustiolus	Mustiolus	Regulus

The diminutives from noun stems have been mentioned in the preceding section. The following are diminutives from nomina: Antulus (from Antius), Eppilus (from Eppius), Fabullus (from Fabius), Mustiolus (perhaps from Mustius or of Greek origin). Names formed on adjectives stems are Datullus, Faustiolus, Gemellus, Macellus, Mascellio, Masculus, Nigellio, Novellus, Primul(l)us, Quintilus, Quintulus, Satullus, Tertiolum, and Tertullus. Gudullus and Nampulus are the diminutive forms of two Punic names. Marculus and Titullus are diminutives formed from the praenomina Marcus and Titus. Marcellus and Proculus are the cognomina in this section most frequently found and these have been discussed in Chap. I. For Vindilus vid. Cognomina of Celtic origin, perhaps from Vindicatus. Lugudunolus is the only diminutive form in a cognomen referring to the name of a town. In the name Auricullus the reading of the stone is not beyond question.

The distribution of these diminutive forms in the several provinces corresponds closely to the general proportional division of all the cognomina in this collection. Names which appear in the first century are Buculus, Castellus, Cicatricula, Fabullus, Lugudunolus, Mustiolus, and Tertiolus. Diminutives ending in -io are Omuncio, Mascellio, and Nigellio.

Apart from Marcellus and Proculus, which though diminutive in form owe their popularity to other reasons, Gemellus is the most common cognomen among the diminutives. Fifteen examples have been collected and one case of the spelling Gemelus. Seven instances have been taken from names in Africa. Ammaedara, Cirta, Thysdrus, and the camp are the homes of five men bearing this cognomen. M. Numisius Gemelus is possibly the same man as M. Numisius Gemellus on another stone. Three papyri from Egypt have preserved soldiers' names with the cognomen Gemellus. The men named in these were in service between the years 95 and 140. Syria and Moesia are localities in which the name Gemellus has been found.

Four of the five cognomina ending in -olus are found in names in Africa, Faustiolus, Lugudunolus, Mustiolus, and Tertiolus. Cf. Cognomina ending in -osus.

PRAENOMINA USED AS COGNOMINA

(On praenomina in Roman names vid. Schneider, Beiträge zur Kenntniss der römischen Personennamen). Gaius (Caius), Lucius, Marcus, and Titus which are usually praenomina appear also as cognomina in several names. Gaius has been noted in the inscriptions from Lambaesis later than the reign of Hadrian, and in Moesia probably not earlier than the principate of Marcus Aurelius. Four inscriptions containing legionary names preserve the cognomen Caius; two are later than the first century and two can be dated about the year 220. Lucius is the cognomen in twelve names and all the dated instances are later than the first century. Savaria is the home of T. Cervonius Lucius, a centurion at Anerya in the XVI Flavia. Tib. Claudius Lucius at Lambaesis indicates Philadelphia as his birth-place. The sixteen cases of the cognomen Marcus have already been commented on in Chap. I. These too are probably later than the first century. Titus as a cognomen is represented by five examples. The known dates of inscriptions preserving this cognomen are in the second and third centuries.

The numeral adjectives Primus, Secundus, Tertius, and Sextus were employed as praenomina at one time. The use of Sextus as a praenomen is probably more common than as a cognomen. The other three have been discussed in Chap. I. Praenomina of the early period which became cognomina under the Empire are Agrippa, Postumus, Proculus, Salvius (note the name Salvius Febranus Baculus borne by a centurion of the XXth legion at the beginning of the first century), Tullus, and Vibius. Tiberius has not been found as a cognomen.

COGNOMINA CONNECTED WITH THE NAMES OF DIVINITIES

The cognomina in names of men enrolled in the legions which show connection with the names of divinities are the following:

Apolinaris	Ascla	Iovinus	Salutaris
Apolinarius	Asclepiades	Liberalis	Saturnalis
Apollinaris	Asclepiodorus	Martialis	Saturnilus
Apollodorus	Bacchius	Martis	Saturninus
Apollonius	Castor	Mercurialis	Saturnus
Apollophanes	Cerealis	Minervalis	Terminalis
Apollos	Cerialis	Neptunalis	Vestalis
Apulinaris	Hermes	Nereus
Apulonius	Iauuarius	Sabasianus

Ianuarius, Martialis, and Saturninus are the most frequently used of this group of names. These are discussed in Chap. I. Further comment on the significance of the widespread use of these three names in Africa will be found in Chap. III. The Cognomina of African Legionaries. Asclepiades, Cerialis, Liberalis, Martialis, and Saturninus have been found in inscriptions of the first century. Several of these name are noted in the section dealing with names referring to birthdays. The Greek name of the divinity is retained in names referring to Apollo, Asclepius, Bacchus, Hermes, and Nereus.

The remaining gods are Roman, except that Sabasianus refers to a Phrygian divinity Ceres, Minerva, and Vesta are the female divinities to receive mention in the names of legionaries. The adjective Salutaris may contain a reference to the personification of Salus. For Saturus consult Saturninus in Chap. I.

NAMES OF EMPERORS USED AS COGNOMINA

The following names which are chiefly known to us as the names of Emperors are also found in use as the cognomina of men in the legions; Antoninus, Augustus, Aurelius, Claudius, Com(m)odus, Domitius, Nero, Nerva, Otho, and Septimius. Antoninus is the most commonly used and has been discussed in Chap. I. Aurelius, Claudius, Domitius, and Septimius are usually nomina, vid. Chapter III, Imperial Nomina. As cognomina their use is certainly later than the first century—Aurelius and Septimius can be dated in the third century. Tiberius has not been found in the names of soldiers as a cognomen. The single instance of Nerva is dated in the year 70. The only example of the name Otho belongs to the period before the reign of Claudius. Nero appears in the name L. Ulpius Nero natus Berito borne by a veteran at Lambaesis. Com(m)odus is found at the same place, the cognomen of a man born in camp. Augustus is represented in the names of two legionaries in service later than the first century.

WELL-KNOWN COGNOMINA AT ROME WHICH ARE FOUND IN THE NAMES OF LEGIONARIES

In the names of Roman legionaries there are found many instances of the use of cognomina which are well-known to us from their designation of prominent persons. Some of these names, as we know, came to be regarded as typifying a man of a certain character. Sulla seems to have been such a name. It is not impossible that other names like Crassus, Cato, or Varro were given to men for similar reasons. Our ignorance of the actual circumstances under which these cognomina were bestowed forbids anything more than idle speculation in regard to their applicability to the character of the men who bore them.

The following list presents the names of this sort.

Agrippa	Farsuleus	Naso	Scaeva
Bassus	Galba	Nero	Scipio
Caesernus	Glabrio	Otho	Seneca
Cato	Horte(n)sis	Pedo	Sulla
Cinna	Lucillus	Pansa	(Silla)
Cossutus	Lucullus	Plancus	Varro
Cotta	Maro	Plotus	Varus
Crassus	Messalla	Pollio	Veranus
Fabullus	Metelus	Porcio	Vetulenus

This list might be extended by the addition of such names as Capito, Fronto, Proculus, and others, but the cognomina for which this section was designed are those which have no apparent connection with any of the sections which precede this. Bassus is the cognomen most commonly used, vid. discussion of these instances in Chap. I. Caesernus, Cossutus, Farsuleus, and Plotus are ordinarily nomina ending in -ius. These then may be joined to the list of nomina which is given under the heading of Cognomina Ending in -ius.

The supernomen Caligatus which accompanies the cognomen Cato is discussed in Chapter III, Double Cognomina.

COGNOMINA ENDING IN -A

The cognomina which end in -a number fifty-four, involving ninety-one names, and are as follows:

Agricola	Curia	Mica	Sera
Agrippa	Curta	Mucattra	Silla
Andra	Diza	Nerva	Sinna
Aquila	Dizza	Nimmira	Sita
Arpoera	Drigissa	Nocina	Soteria
Ascla	Fana	Pansa	Stella
Atta	Galba	Papia	Sulla
Ballista	Gerula	Parra	Sura
Calla	Geta	Rixula	Tara
Cicatricula	Heracla	Salica	Tarsa
Cinna	Heraclida	Sausa	Vala
Coma	Mangala	Scaena	Vepitta
Costa	Messalla	Scaeva	Verna
Cotta	Mestula	Seneca

Of this number the following names are well-known cognomina

among Roman families: Agricola, Agrippa, Cinna, Cotta, Galba, Messalla, Nerva, Scaeva, and Sulla. Pansa and Parra are common names in Etruria and seem to have originated there. Papia is perhaps formed from the nomen Papius. The following are nouns; Aquila, Ballista, Cicatricula, Mica, Rixula, Scaena, Sera, Stella, and Verna. Names in this group of Greek origin are Arpocra, Ascla, Coma, Heraclla, Heraclida, and Soteria. Names of Thracian origin which end in -a are Diza, Dizza, Drigissa, Mucatra, Sita, and Tarsa. The following are of Celtic origin: Atta, Calla, Nocina, Salica, and Vepitta. Curia and Curta, words of Celtic origin, are place names used as cognomina. Geta is a cognomen which contains a reference to the original home of the soldier who bears it. The same is probably true of the word Sura. Sausa is puzzling and perhaps is to be connected with the river Sau. Vala is a name of Arabic origin. Andra may be a Thracian name. Nimmira is possibly a native African word. Costa, the reading of the stone, has been restored as Constans. The following are of doubtful origin: Fana, Gerula (cf. Gerulata, Holder s. v. Altcelt. Sprachlsch.), Mangala (cf. Nimmira above), Mestula, and Sinna.

COGNOMINA ENDING IN -ANUS

The thirty cognomina which end in -anus have been separated from those ending in -ianus; vid. next section. These are:

Africanus	Easuctanus	Leuganus	Soranus
Albanus	Firmanus	Lucanus	Urbanus
Auluzanus	Galicanus	Montanus	Veranus
Bellicanus	Germanus	Muntanus	Veteranus
Campanus	Herculanus	Proculeanus	Vicanus
Catanus	Hispanus	Romanus	Violanus
Cattanus	Ispanus	Saturnanus
Dazanus	Iulanus	Silvanus

Several adjectives with geographical or racial significance end in -anus: viz., Africanus, Albanus, Campanus, Galicanus, Germanus, Hispanus, Ispanus, Lucanus, Romanus, and Soranus. Other adjectives which were also mentioned under this heading are Montanus, Muntanus, Silvanus, Urbanus, and Vicanus. Bellicanus is formed from the adjective bellicus. (Bellicianus is also found.) Proculeanus is connected with the well-known cognomen Proculus. Iulanus has been considered an engraver's error for Iulianus. Saturnanus is evidently a variant form of the common name Saturninus. Firmanus corresponds in a similar way to Firminus. Veteranus is a noun used as a cognomen. (Consult the section devoted to nouns for other instances of words denoting military offices used as cognomina.) Herculanus is a name of Greek origin. Leuganus and Violanus, possibly also Catanus and Cattanus, are Celtic names. Auluzanus is Thracian in origin, and perhaps Dazanus is to be assigned to the same source. For Easuctanus vid. reference under Cognomina of Punic origin. Veranus is classed among the cognomina well-known at Rome. Germanus and Silvanus are the names of this group which have been found frequently enough to class them among the popular cognomina, vid. Chapter I.

COGNOMINA ENDING IN -IANUS

Cognomina which end in -ianus are found in the present collection to the number of two hundred and thirty-one, involving six hundred and twelve names. For convenience in reference these are subdivided into three classes. The first list contains such names as are formed on adjective stems, e. g., Acutianus from acutus, Iustianus from iustus and so on.

Acutianus	Euticianus	Iustianus	Quintil(I)ianus
Amandianus	Faustianus	Maximianus	Rogatianus
Atticianus	Faustinianus	Nigrianus	Sabinianus
Avitianus	Felicianus	Nobilianus	Secundianus
Bellicianus	Festianus	Pacatianus	Severianus
Campanianus	Finitianus	Paternianus	Sextianus
Candidianus	Flaccianus	Peregrinianus	Sextianus
Celerianus	Firmianus	Pervincianus	Successianus
Concessianus	Firminianus	Primianus	Superianus
Crescentianus	Florianus	Primicianus	Tacitianus
Cupitianus	Fortunatianus	Priscianus	Tertianus
Datianus	Fuscianus	Priscillianus	Tertullianus
Decuminianus	Gemellianus	Probianus	Valentianus
Dextrianus	Geminianus	Pudentianus	Vetustianus
Donatianus	Gratianus	Quintianus	Vitalianus
Eutichianus	Honoratianus	Pintianus

The second and most numerous group consists of cognomina formed from nomina, e. g., Aemilianus from Aemilius, Sittianus from Sittius.

Acilianus	Cattianus	Macianus	Rutilianus
Aelianus	Cirrenianus	Magnianus	Sallubianus
Aemilianus	Claudianus	Maianus	Sallustianus
Albucianus	Cornelianus	Manlianus	Salvianus
Ambrelianus	Deccianus	Marcianus	Sedianus
Annianus	Decianus	Marinianus	Sempronianus
Antonianus	Dentilianus	Martianus	Sennianus
Appianus	Domitianus	Martinianus	Sentianus
Apronianus	Egnatianus	Marullianus	Seppianus
Arellianus	Egrilianus	Messianus	Sertorianus
Ἄρουτιανός	Epianus	Μεστριανός	Servianus
Arrianus	Fabianus	Minucianus	Sittianus
Arruntianus	Fabricianus	Modianus	Sossianus
Atil(I)ianus	Fabullianus	Mucianus	Statilianus
Attianus	Fadianus	Munatianus	Sulpicianus
Aufidianus	Farianus	Mussianus	Tartianus
Aurelianus	Flavianus	Nonianus	Terentianus
Avellianus	Furennianus	Novellianus	Trebonianus
Balerianus	Gargilianus	Novianus	Tuttianus
Caecilianus	Herenianus	Numerianus	Ulpianus
Caecinianus	Herenmianus	Octavianus	Valerianus
Caesennianus	Horatianus	Ostillianus	Varianus
Calianus	Oratianus	Paccianus	Vereianus
Calpurnianus	Iulianus	Petianus	Vettianus
Carianus	Iunianus	Pompeianus	Vibianus
Carpianus	Licinianus	Pontianus	Virianus
Καππεριανός	Livianus	Pomponianus	Vultilianus
Cassianus	Lucianus	Porcianus
	Macrianus	Roscrianus

The third class is made up of names formed by -ianus to noun stems, e. g., Nepotianus from nepos; to words of foreign origin, e. g. Sabasianus; to praenomina, e. g. Titianus from Titus; to a cognomen, e. g., Bassianus from Bassus, etc.

Agrippianus	Eufretianus	Meridianus	Sarnianus
Ammonianus	Euphemianus	Negotianus	Seccianus
Amynthianus	Frontianus	Nepotianus	Senecianus
Antiochianus	Frontonianus	Passerianus	Sigillianus
Atreccesianus	Gaianus	Passinianus	Socissianus
Augurianus	Graesianus	Phillippianus	Telesphorianus
Bassianus	Hermianus	Plancianus	Throphimianus
Bruttianus	Hilarianus	Plotianus	Tiberianus
Chamermonianus	Iamianus	Proclianus	Titianus
Charitonianus	Iassianus	Proculeianus	Tychianus
Cilicianus	Leontianus	Regillianus	Umbrianus
Cretianus	Longinianus	Regulianus	Ursianus
Dasianus	Lupianus	Sabasianus	Ursinianus
Demetrianus	Melcidianus	Saburianus	Victorianus
Epaphroditianus	Menecratianus	Safidianus

Cognomina ending in -ianus are found in all parts of the Roman empire. The names which are used most frequently are Iulianus, Marcianus, Rogatianus, and Valerianus. These have been discussed in Chap. I. Rogatianus has been noted in African inscriptions only.

The development of cognomina which end in -ianus in the names of legionaries is for the most part later than the first century. The great majority of the names can be dated and only a comparatively small number belong to the first century. All the names in the first list given above are probably later than the first century. The cognomen Marullianus was borne by a soldier in the IV Macedonica before the reign of Vespasian, and the home of this man was Narbo. Valerianus is the cognomen of a soldier of the XI Claudia in Dalmatia in the interval between the year 42 and the reign of Vespasian. A veteran of the III Augusta in Africa in the year 86 bore the cognomen Paccianus. Tiberianus is preserved in a Greek inscription in Egypt as the cognomen of a centurion serving in the year 83-84. Octavianus is recorded on a papyrus from the same province as the cognomen of a soldier who was in service in the year 90. Aelianus, Flavianus, and Iulianus are the cognomina of centurions of the XV Apollinaris at Carnuntum in the first century. Aelianus is borne by a man whose son of eight years is recorded as having come from Aquileia. The other two names are not preserved entire on the stones, but are the restored readings of editors.

An inscription from Iconium in Syria would furnish the earliest example of a cognomen ending in -ianus, if the restoration were certain. P. Mestrius P. f. Maec is the reading of the stone and in a Greek version which accompanies the Latin the word following the letter "f" has two more letters making the word Μαξια. voc is supplied by the editor, (Cronin J. H. S. XXII, 1902, p. 356). Inasmuch as the legion is cited with only the numeral (?) and another veteran is recorded without a cognomen on this stone, it may be possible that we have here not a cognomen, but the name of the tribe to which P. Mestrius belonged.

In the early second century cognomina which end in -ianus are found with growing frequency; they reach their greatest popularity in the early third century.

For the supernomen in the name Aurelius Secundianus qui et Itrius vid. Chap. III, Double Cognomina.

COGNOMINA ENDING IN -INUS

The ending -inus is found in one hundred and twenty-eight cognomina involving seven hundred and sixty-five names. These cognomina are listed under several subheadings. Considerably more than half of the total number of names are noted under eight cognomina which have already been discussed in Chap. I: viz., Antoninus, Longinus, Marellinus, Rufinus, Sabinus, Saturninus, Valentinus, and Victorinus.

Cognomina formed by adding the ending -inus to adjectival stems appear most frequently, e. g., Clementinus from clemens, Ingenuinus from ingenuus. Nearly half of this group are formed in this way. These are:

Albinus	Deciminus	Materninus	Rufinus
Amandinus	Faustinus	Max(s)iminus	Sanctinus
Auctinus	Firminus	Memorinus	Septiminus
Caelestinus	Flavinus	Nigrinus	Severinus
Celestinus	Florinus	Onestinus	Sextinus
Candidinus	Fuscinus	Paetinus	Solinus
Carinus	Gemellinus	Patruinus	Tertinus
Castinus	Gratinus	Paulinus	Tertullinus
Celerinus	Ingenuinus	Placidinus	Urbicinus
Celsinus	Iustinus	Potentinus	Valentinus
Certinus	Laetus	Priscinus	Valetinus
Clementinus	Laevinus	Probinus	Verinus
Constantinus	Longinus	Quartinus	Vetustinus
Cresecentinus	Macrinus	Quintinus
Crispinus	Masculinus	Repentinus

The ending is added to place-names to form the following cognomina:

Aretinus	Caudinus	Laurentinus	Saloninus
Atticinus	Faventinus	Lavinus	Telesinus
Aventinus	Florentinus	Maurinus	Tevestinus
Camerinus	Helvinus	Olympilinus	Thevestinus
Capetolinus	Iadestinus	Praenestinus
Capitolinus	Latinus	Sabinus

Noun stems with the addition of -inus serve as cognomina in several cases.

Aprinus	Capratinus	Reginus	Viatorinus
Aquilinus	Censorinus	Sementinus	Victorinus
Augurinus	Equinus	Silvinus
Kalandinus	Frontinus	Taurinus
Kalendinus	Piscinus	Ursinus

The addition of -inus to certain well-known cognomina is observed in ten names; Agrip(p)inus, Antullinus, Bassinus, Catulinus, Marcellinus, Messallinus, Nervinus, Proclinus, and Proculinus. Tiberinus shows the same process at work with a praenomen. Antoninus, Aponinus, Maicinus, Martinus, and Valerinus are formed from nomina by the addition of this suffix. Iovinus and Saturninus are related to the names of divinities. Calinus and Charinus are of Greek origin. Agrinus, Nervinus, and Reburrinus are formed from Celtic roots. The following names are of uncertain origin; Cittinus, Colinus, Iullinus, Rosinus, and Stiminus. Geminus, Marinus, and Peregrinus are adjectives taken directly into use as cognomina.

Cognomina ending in -inus are found in the names of legionaries somewhat earlier than those ending in -ianus as far as one may judge from a comparison of the instances which can be dated in the first century. Aquilinus is found in the name of a soldier who served before the year 42. Stiminus is the cognomen of a centurion in Palestine in the year 68. Colinus is the cognomen of a soldier born at Eporedia who served in the XVth legion before the reign of Vespasian. Firminus and Flavinus are borne by men enrolled in the X Gemina while in Spain before the year 70. M. Iulius Marinus whose home is Forum Iulii was a soldier at Mainz also before the year 70. Maurinus belongs to this early period. Iadestinus is the cognomen of a soldier whose home is Iader serving at Mainz in the interval between the years 70 and 100. Other cognomina with this suffix which can be assigned to the first century are Clementinus, Longinus, Macrinus, Marinus, Maxsiminus, Rufinus, Sabinus, Saturninus (seven instances), Valentinus, and Victorinus. For comment on the name Aurelius qui et Septimius Constantinus vid. Chap. III, Double Cognomina.

COGNOMINA ENDING IN -IUS

Cognomina which end in -ius in this collection number one hundred and thirty and include a total of three hundred and twenty-two names. For convenience in reference these cognomina have been subdivided. The first group consists of nomina of Roman gentes which are used as cognomina.

Accius	Dasius	Lucilius	Seius
Acculeius	Dassius	Macrinius	Septimius
Antonius	Dasumius	Macrobius	Servilius
Atilius	Domitius	Magius	Sextilius
Attius	Egnatius	Magnius	Sossius
Aufidius	Eppanius	Marius	Staius
Aurelius	Erennius	Martius	Statilius
Avillius	Fabius	Messius	Tannonus
Barbius	Fabricius	Mestrius	Terentius
Bebius	Fanius	Minutius	Trinius
Blasius	Flavius	Modius	Tullius
Caecilius	Fundanius	Octavius	Tuttius
Caelius	Galloni	Opsilius	Valerius
Carius	Gellius	Pavius	Valius
Cassius	Gessius	Pontius	Veratius
Casius	Horatius	Pullaenius	Vettius
Castricius	Iulius	Roscius	Vibius
Cerfonius	Iunius	Rulius	Victorius
Claudius	Licinius	Saenius	Vincentius
Cocaius	Lucius	Salvius	Volusius

The practice of using nomina as cognomina is largely confined to the later period of the Empire. The only nomina so used which can be dated in the first century are Accius, Fabius, and Trinius. Trinius is the name of a centurion in Dalmatia before the year 42 and it is possible that this is a true nomen and not a cognomen. The name on the stone is in the genitive case, Trini. Accius is the cognomen of a soldier in Italy perhaps before the year 89. Fabius appears in the name L. Fabius Fab(i)us borne by a soldier whose home is Nertobriga serving before the reign of Vespasian. This is the only case of a name among the soldiers in which the nomen and cognomen seem to be identical. (For instances of close similarity between nomen and cognomen vid. Chap. III.) Acculeius, Eppanius, Fanius, and Rulius are the cognomina of soldiers in Egypt before the year 108. (The reading of Wessely has been adopted in the names from this papyrus.) Saenius is the name of a centurion in service during the period between the reigns of Vespasian and Trajan.

The nomen most commonly employed as a cognomen is Val-erius. Sixteen examples have been collected from the names of legionaries.

Attention may be called to the name Dasius or Dassius. (Vid. Pauly-Wissowa, s. v., Schulze Lat. Eigennamen p. 44, note 5, p. 39, note 1, & Index.) Four of the six cases of Dassius appear in a military list in Moesia cut in the year 195. Dasius belongs to the same root. Cf. Dazanus, and Dasianus. In the inscription noted above the name Mestrius is recorded three times and another instance is found in the name of a veteran in the same province and legion (VII Claudia). Only one other case of Mestrius has been found and this is also preserved in the Danube region.

The second group of cognomina ending in -ius contains names of various kinds, as follows:

Ammausius	Caius	Gumasius	Placidinius
Ammonius	Caprarius	Gusorius	Primigenius
Anatolius	Catervarius	Guzabius	Primitius
Apolinarius	Ceprucius	Hellenius	Sabius
Apollonius	Congius	Heraclius	Sarmatius
Apricius	Curtavius	Ianuarius	Silamius
Apulonius	Demetrius	Matthaius	Siliquarius
Ascanius	Dionisius	Mocetius	Sterceius
Aspadius	Dionysius	Mucrubius	Sudius
Aulcentius	Doncius	Numidius	Tertius
Balius	Dubius	Nummenius	Thubunius
Bienius	Firmidius	Pequareius
Brumasius	Florius	Petunnatus
Buturarius	Gaius	Pius

In this group the names of Greek origin are Anatolius, Apolinarius, Apollonius, Apulonius, Demetrius, Dionisius or Dionysius, Hellenius, and Heraclius. Celtic in origin are Ammausius, Aspadius, Balius, Bienius (Bienus), Congius, Curtavius, and Mocetius. Aulcentius and Sudius are Thracian names. The following names were found in Africa and if not Punic in origin they are perhaps native names, Buturarius, Mucrubius, Gumasius, Guzabius, and Nummenius. Numidius and Thubunius also from this province indicate the homes of the men who bear them. Ammonius is an Egyptian name. Ascanius seems to be Phrygian in origin. Matthaius is a Semitic name. Doncius and Gusorius are possibly Celtic. Petunnatus and Silamius are of uncertain origin.

Adjectives ending in -ius serve as cognomina in the words Catervarius, Dubius, Ianuarius, Pius, Primigenius, Sterceius, and Tertius. The following are from adjectival stems: Firmidius, Florius, Placidinius (probably an engraver's error for Placidinus), and Primitius. Siliquarius and Pequarius are nouns ending in -ius. Apricius, Brumasius, and Caprarius are formations from nouns. Sabius is doubtless an error for Sabinus. Caius or Gaius and Lucius are praenomina used as cognomina. Bienius or probably Bienus (Vid. Holder Altcelt. Sprachsch. Nachträge) is the name of a centurion in service before the reign of Claudius. Ascanius also belongs to this early period. The only other cognomen of this group which can be assigned to the first century is Dubius borne by a soldier whose home is Milan serving during the principate of Domitain. Gusorius is the name of a centurion in Germany in service in the period between the reigns of Vespasian and Trajan. For Tertius and Ianuarius which are most frequently found, vid. Chapter I.

COGNOMINA ENDING IN -LIS

Thirty-seven cognomina which end in -lis appear in the present collection involving two hundred and thirty-two names. The following cognomina constitute this group:

Aedilis	Facilis	Liberalis	Saturnalis
Amabilis	Fatalis	Martialis	Senilis
Aeternalis	Fidelis	Mercurialis	Similis
Annalis	Flaminialis	Minervalis	Sodalis
Aprilis	Genialis	Mucatralis	Terminalis
Augustalis	Gentilis	Natalis	Vestalis
Aulutralis	Gracilis	Neptunalis	Virilis
Cerealis	Hospitalis	Provincialis	Vitalis
Cerialis	Ingenuilis	Quirinalis	Vitealis
Civilis	Iuvenalis	Reginalis

Among this number the names Martialis and Vitalis are employed as cognomina most frequently. These have been discussed in Chap. I. Aulutralis and Mucatralis are of Thracian origin. All the other cognomina are native Latin words. Aedilis, Aprilis, Flaminialis, and Sodalis are nouns. The remaining names are adjectives. A large number of these relate to divinities and birth-days; Cerialis, Liberalis, Martialis, Minervalis, Mercurialis, Neptunalis, Saturnalis, Vestalis, Augus-talis, Quirinalis, and Terminalis, Natalis is also a birth-day cognomen. The following adjectives imply the possession of mental or moral qualities; Amabilis, Facilis, Genialis, and Hospitalis. Gracilis, Virilis, and Vitalis contain a reference to physical qualities. Four adjectives have something of a temporal element in them: Aeternalis, Annalis, Iuvenalis, and Senilis. Provincialis carries with it a "local" significance. Gentilis, Ingenuilis, Fatalis, Reginalis, and Similis are adjectives with this suffix not already mentioned in this section.

COGNOMINA ENDING IN -O

Cognomina which end in -o have been noted in one hundred names involving a total of one hundred and ninety-eight instances. The following list presents these names.

Aelurio	Domnio	Mommo	Satto
Agatho	Dosso	Mucco	Saturio
Andio	Fronto	Myro	Saxo
Aquilo	Glabrio	Namfamo	Scipio
Arimo	Glico	Namphamo	Senecio
Aristo	Hilario	Naso	Serapio
Artemo	Hispelo	Nerido	Serrapio
Athenio	Iunio	Nero	Silo
Atto	Laco	Nigellio	Solo
Baricio	Lellavvo	Nio	Sorio
Bato	Leo	Omuncio	Strabo
Baudio	Libo	Otho	Subsio
Betto	Longo	Panno	Surio
Bito	Lycao	Pedo	Tatulo
Britto	Macedo	Plato	Thrupo
Bucco	Macro	Polio	Tiro
Cabrio	Magio	Pollio	Tucco
Calvio	Magnio	Porcio	Turbo
Capito	Maro	Pussinio	Ulpro
Cato	Mascellio	Quartio	Ursio
Cilo	Matto	Restio	Valerio
Daizo	Matuco	Rhyto	Vario
Diabo	Maximo	Sacco	Varro
Dizo, Dizzo	Militio	Samunio	Virilio
Domitio	Milo	Sarapio	Vocco

The cognomina which are found most frequently are Fronto, vid. Chap. I, and Capito. Names of Greek origin ending in -o are Aelurio, Agatho, Aristo, Artemo, Athenio, Glico, Hilario, Laco, Lycao, Milo, Myro, Nio, Plato, Rhyto, Solo, and Strabo.

Similar to these are several names which preserve the final consonant and cannot be said to end in -o, Κόνων, Ήών, Iason, Νέων, Solon, Timon, and Zenon, cf. Focion. The cognomen Libo is possibly Greek in origin. Zimmermann (Vid. Bibliography) concludes that the name contains the same stem as libet. Schulze, Lat. Eigennamen, Index s. v. "Unsicher bleibt die gleiche Auffassung für die cognomen Libo." The cognomen Bato according to Kretschmer E.p. 246 is an Illyrican name = "Fürst und Barτων, Fürst der Illyrier. Hierher auch Iulius Betto VI 3333." Zimmermann op. cit. p. 233, Schulze, Lat. Eigennamen p. 32 note 1. The name Betto mentioned above may be Thracian. It is also cited by Schönfeld (Vid. Bibliography) as a Germanic name. Names which are certainly Thracian are Bito, Daizo, Dizo, and Dizzo. Celtic names in -o are Andio, Cabrio, Matto, Matuco, Mommo, Nerido, Restio, Sacco, Saxo, Sorio, Subsio, Surio, Tatulo, Tucco, and Vocco. Names of Germanic origin are Atto, Baudio, Lellavvo, and Thrupo. Baricio and Namfamo or Namphamo are Punic names. One Egyptian name appears in three forms Sarapio, Serapio, and Serrapio.

Nouns ending in -o employed as cognomina are Aquilo, Bucco, Capito, Cilo, Dosso, Fronto, Leo, Mucco, Naso, Omuncio, Polio, Senecio, Tiro, and Turbo. The following are well-known cognomina in Rome: Cato, Maro (possibly of Celtic origin), Naso, Nero, Otho, Pedo, Pollio, Porcio, Scipio, and Varro. The names Britto, Hispelo, Macedo, and Panno contain a reference to the birth-place of the men who bore them. Glabrio, Macro, and Silo are also mentioned with adjectives denoting physical qualities. Pedo might be included with these. The form Macro may be due to Greek influence.

The following group has been reserved to the end of this section for especial comment because the names which compose it appear to be comic formations in -o. Eighteen of them have been noted in the names of men enrolled in the legions. These are Athenio, Calvio, Domitio, Domnio, Iunio, Longo, Magio, Magnio, Mascellio, Maximo, Militio, Nigel(l)io, Pussinio (connected with pusilio, pusillus), Quartio, Saturio, Ursio, Valerio, Vario, and Virilio. The names Naso, Pedo, and Porcio may have had a similar origin. Ten of these cognomina were found in the Danube provinces. Three can be dated in the year 195, Domitio borne by a veteran from Nicopolis, Magnio borne by a veteran from Remesiana (?), and Maximo. Militio and Nigilio are later than the year 170. Pussinio is later than the first century. Athenio, Calvio, Domnio, and Nigellio are found in the Danube region in undated inscriptions. (For Athenio vid. App. Mithr. 59 cited by Kempf, Romanorum Sermonis Castrensis Reliquiae, p. 356). Iunio, a native of Napoca, was at Lambaesis during the principate of Antoninus Pius. Magio and Mascellio were centurions at the same camp in the year 162. Quartio is found in Africa in the second half of the second century and in the early third. Longo is the cognomen of a centurion in Egypt serving before the year 108. This name with Virilio are the earliest cases of names in this group. Virilio is found twice in Germany; one instance is earlier than the reign of Vespasian, the second in the name of a soldier whose home is Milan is possibly in the first century. Saturio is noted on a stone at Mainz. Ursio is found in one name in Italy and again at Lyons.

Names of uncertain derivation are Arimo, Diabo, Samunio, and Ulpro. With the exception of the last which is undated all are later than the year 195.

Proclion and Viction appear to be formations in -o with the addition of a final consonant in imitation of Greek names. Viction is considered a Celtic name by Holder, vid. section devoted to Cognomina of Celtic origin.

COGNOMINA ENDING IN -OSUS

(Vid. Mommsen, Cognomina Africana, Ephem. Epig. pp. 520-524). Among the cognomina of legionaries the following have been found ending in -osus, Albosus, Apricosus, Barosus, Bonosus, and Fructuosus. All except Apricosus appear at Lambaesis in Africa. Of these names we know that two are cognomina of men who were born in the African towns of Carthage and Simitthus. On account of the frequency of names with the ending -osus in this province it is very probable that the other two of these names are borne by men who were natives of Africa. Apricosus is the cognomen of a centurion in the II Parthica stationed in the Ager Albanus. All these men having names ending in -osus were in service toward the end of the second century, or during the first half of the third.

COGNOMINA ENDING IN -X

Thirteen names ending in -x will be found in the alphabetical list of cognomina of men enrolled in the legions. These are Audax, Efficax, Eudox, Farnax, Felix, Ferox, Ieraxs, Pertinax, Simplex, Tenax, Velox, Verax, and Vindex. Three of these are words of Greek origin: viz., Eudox, Farnax, and Ieraxs. The remaining names are of Latin origin and all except Vindex are adjectives. The Greek names have been taken from inscriptions in the Danube provinces. The others are well scattered among the various provinces of the Empire. Felix has been found to be the most commonly used cognomen in the names of soldiers, vid. discussion of Felix in Chap. I. Excepting Simplex, Verax, and the Greek names the cognomina ending in -x appear to be appropriate ones for men in military service and have been noted with others in the first section of this chapter. Vid. Introductory Note to Alphabetical List.

COGNOMINA OF ARABIC ORIGIN

Μεσάμαρος and Vala are Arabic names which are used as cognomina by legionary soldiers. The latter name is borne by a soldier in Germany in the period between the reigns of Vespasian and Trajan. Μεσάμαρος γένος Νάζας was enrolled in the III Cyrenaica in Arabia after the year 108. The name Ἀουεῖδος appears as a supernomen with the cognomen Germanus, q. v. Chap. I and cf. Chap. III, Double Cognomina.

COGNOMINA OF CELTIC ORIGIN

An exhaustive collection of Celtic names has been made by Alfred Holder, Altceltischer Sprachschatz and Nachträge, and that work has been used in making the present classification. Eighty names are represented in the following list:

Aludias	Attilus	Caeticus	Curtavius
Ammausius	Atta	Calenus	Eppillus
Andiccus	Atto	Calla	Essus
Andio	Balius	?Callus = Gallus?	Gedus
Annamatus	Baudio	Carantus	Gusorius
Artillus	Bersimes	Catullus	Lavenus
Aruseenus	Bienus	Celtiber	Leuganus
Aspadius	Boniatus	Comargus	Maceaus
Atreccesianus	Bucco	Condunus	Magio
Atrectus	Cadarus	Cotus	Manduccus

Mascellio	Nocina	Satto	Tatulo
Matto	Parasenus	Saxo	Tucco
Matuco	Parra	Seccianus	Vepitta
Mocetius	Pintianus	Seccus	Viction
Moenenus	Reburrinus	Sorio	Vindilus
Mommo	Reburrus	Stambon	Violanus
?Mude(nus?)	Sacco	Subsio	Virilio
Nerido	Salica	Sugasis	Vithannus
Nertus	Sallubianus	Surio	Vitullus
Nervinus	Sammus	Tara	Vocco

It may prove helpful to make use here of the comments of Holder and others on some of these names: Aludisas, reading corrupt (Holder, Nachträge); Arusenus, vid. Schulze, Lat. Eigennamen, Index s. v.; Atta cf. Festus, Epit. p. 12-13M.; Atto, partly Celtic, partly Germanic; Bienus not Bienius is the reading of Holder, Nachträge; Calenus, Celtic origin not wholly certain; Eppillus “m. cognomen w ebill (an auger, a chisel, the key of a harp)”; Matto, Kosenamen also Greek; Matuco, Kosenamen; “Nervinus von ethnicon Nervius”; Satto partly of Germanic origin; Vindillus cf. Vindillus “kurzname für Vindicatus(?)”.

Cognomina which may be Celtic in origin are Agrinus, Cabrio, Cattanus (possibly Catanus), Congius (Congus in Holder, Nachträge), Curia and Curta, place names (cited in Holder with a “?” as to origin), Dioratus (Diorata and Diratus in Holder), Doncius (Donicus and Donicius in Holder), Gainas (Gainia, feminine nomen in Holder, cf. Caina. The stem Gain seems to be Germanic), Gerula (Gerulata in Holder connected with Chertobalos in Pannonia Superior, i. e., Karlburg?), Labrases (in Holder with “?”), Nerva, Pardus, and Sinna. Surus is also considered Celtic by Holder, Tomaschek places it among the Thracian names.

Nearly three-fourths of the Celtic names have been found in the provinces the inscriptions of which are published in volumes III and XIII of the CIL. The remainder, slightly over one-fourth, appear in inscriptions found in England, Spain, Africa, and Italy. By far the earliest Celtic name to be found in a military inscription is Coton, the name of a centurion in Egypt during the principate of Augustus. In Germany the following names belonging to the first century have been noted: Bienus (Bienius), the cognomen of a centurion in service possibly before the reign of Claudius, Andiccus, Bucco, Parra (the cognomen of a soldier born at Baeterrae), Sacco (the cognomen of a soldier whose home is Milan), and Virilio—all names of men serving before the year 70. Early names outside of this province are Celtiber in Spain probably before the year 70, Salica, the cognomen of a legionary in England, born at Lyons, shortly after the year 71, Surio which seems to be Celtic rather than Thracian is borne by a soldier, whose home is Caesaraugusta, serving in Dalmatia before the year 70. Examples of Celtic names can be dated as late as the first quarter of the third century. Names which appear as cognomina in more than one instance are Atillus, Reburrinus, Reburrus (Surus), and Virilio. All four examples of the name Reburrus are found in Spanish inscriptions. Besides the towns already mentioned, the following, Ratiaria, Virunum, Iguvium, Cambodunum, Emerita, Verona, Bononia, and Cirta, are the homes of men who have Celtic names.

COGNOMINA OF EGYPTIAN ORIGIN

The names Ammonius, Ammonianus, Sarapammon, Sarapio, Serapio, Serrapio, and Σουχιδᾶς are Egyptian in origin. Ammonius is found in Egypt in three names, one can be dated in the year 167–8, two in the year 194. One instance is in the name of a man born in Alexandria. Ammonianus is the cognomen of a veteran serving in the year 194, who was born in camp. The stone was found at Alexandria. Sarapio and Serapio appear in six names at Lambaesis. Three instances are in the names of men born in camp, and serving during the reign of Antoninus Pius. One example can be dated in the year 198. Serrapio is found in a name at Rome borne by a man in service after the year 193. Sarapammon is noted in the names of three veterans in the year 194 at Alexandria; two were born in camp, the third at Tani.

Σουχιδᾶς is perhaps as late as the fourth century in Egypt.

COGNOMINA OF GERMANIC ORIGIN

(Vid. Schönfeld, Wörterbuch der altgermanischen Personen- und Völkernamen.) The following are considered Germanic by Schönfeld Atto, “teil germanisch” (vid. Celtic section), Baudio (also in list of Celtic names), Lellavvo “wol germanisch,” Thrupo (Schönfeld sub Trupo, perhaps Germanic though by no means certain), and Ulfus. The name Ulfus is the only name of this group to be dated with certainty and can be assigned to the reign of Alexander Severus (222–235).

COGNOMINA OF GREEK ORIGIN

The cognomina of Greek origin in the names of Roman legionaries number one hundred and ninety-two, involving three hundred and twenty-eight names. The following list presents these:

Achilleus	Asmenus	Difilus	Heraclida
Aelurio	Atalus	Diogenes	Heraclius
Agatho	Atticianus	Diomedes	Herculanus
Agathocles	Atticinus	Diodorus	Hermes
Alexander	Atticus	Dionisius	Hermias
Alexandrus	Athenio	Dionysius	Hermianus
Amarantus	Bacchius	Dioscorus	Herodes
Amyntianus	Basilides	Eleuther	"Ηρων
Anatolius	Berulus	Emporus	Hilarianus
Andromacus	Burrus	Enthimus	Hilario
Andronicus	Caeneus	Epapr̄hoditianus	Hilarus
Anicetus	Calamus	Epaproditus	Hymnus
Antigonus	Calicles	'Ἐπίκτητος	Iason
Antiochianus	Calinus	Esper	Ieraxs
Antiochus	Callimachus	Εὐδήμος	Ischyron
Apelles	Callisthenes	Eugenius	Isidorus
Apolinaris	Callistratus	Euphemianus	Laco
Apolinarius	Carpophorus	Euphrosynus	Laenas
Apollinaris	Chaeremonianus	Eutrofus	Laficus
Apollodorus	Chaireas	Eutichianus	Leonides
Apollonius	Charinus	Euticianus	Libo
Apollophanes	Charitonianus	Eutyches	Lisimacus
Apollos	Cleonicus	Farnax	Lusimacus
Apolodorus	Coma	Filiscus	Lycao
Apulinaris	Comastos	Focion	Lycus
Apulonius	Kόγων	Glaucus	Lysias
Aratus	Corus	Glico	Maccus
Archelaus	Crysomallus	Hadrias	Melissus
Aristaenetus	Daphnus	Haniochus	Menauder
Aristides	Dardanus	Arpocra	Menecratianus
Aristo	Deiotarus	Hebenus	Menilaeus
Artemidorus	Demetrianus	Helenus	Metrodorus
Artemo	Demetrius	Hellenius	Milo
Asclepiades	Δημοκράτης	Heliodorus	Monimus
Asclepiodorus	Demostenes	Heracula	Moschus
Ascla	Didymus	Heracles	Mustiolus?

Myro	Patroclus	Solo	Theopompus
Neptolemus	Phileterus	Solon	Timon
Nereus	Φίλτρος	Sophaenetus	Timotheus
Nestor	Philippianus	Sosigenes	Threptus
Naestor	Philippus	Sotas	Throphimianus
Nicomachus	Plato	Soter	Trofimas
Nicostratus	Protus	Soteria	Troilus
Nio	Ptoleus	Strabo	Tychianus
Νέων	Ptolmeus	Telesphorianus	Tyrannus
Olympilinus	Pyrrus	Thalamus	Zenon
Ὀνήσιμος	Rhyto	Theodorus	Zenophilus
Onesiphorus	Seleucus	Theomolpus	Zenostratus

Forty-two per cent., plus, of the Greek names have been found in the provinces the inscriptions of which are published in CIL III. Twenty-seven per cent., plus, of these names are taken from African inscriptions. The remainder of the instances of the Greek names are scattered in other parts of the Empire. Greek cognomina in the names of Roman citizens are not common during the first century. The names which can be assigned to this period are Asclepiades natione Cilice, Burrus (possibly of Celtic origin cf. Reburrus), borne by a soldier whose home was Forum Iulii, Diomedes (68), Laco (37–41), Laenas, Milo (domo Luca, Strabo, the cognomen of a soldier who was born at Ptolomais. Atticinus and Melissus probably belong to the first century and Zenon is earlier than the year 108. Greek names can be dated throughout the second and third centuries and as late as the beginning of the fourth century. A military list of the year 194 at Alexandria contains nineteen Greek cognomina and ten of these belong to the names of men born in camp. A similar inscription of the year 195 found at Viminacium in Moesia preserves ten names of Greek origin. In Africa the series of Greek names continues as late as the inscriptive evidence from the province supplies the names of men in the legion stationed there.

For the ending -ianus attached to Greek names vid. section devoted to cognomina ending in -ianus in this chapter. Several Greek names suited to soldiers are noted: viz., Achilleus, Anictetus, Nicomachus and others.

The several instances of a supernomen in Greek names are collected in Chapter III, Double Cognomina. Alexander is the cognomen to be most commonly used and this name has received some comment in Chapter I. Didymus, Eleuther, Eutyches, Eugenus, and Protus would seem to be translations of Latin cognomina already in use.

COGNOMEN OF ILLYRIAN ORIGIN

The cognomen Bato recorded as the son of Neritanus, a soldier of the II Adiutrix, is found on a stone at Aquincum in Pannonia. For other occurrences of the name Bato in inscriptions vid. Index cognominum in CIL III, the Thesaurus Linguae Latinae s. v., and Schulze, Lat. Eigennamen p. 32, note 1. Batus Neritane, the reading of Gündel, De legione II Adiutrice, p. 67, is not supported by other authorities who have dealt with this inscription.

COGNOMEN OF LIGURIAN ORIGIN

The name Aunus is considered a name of Ligurian origin, vid. Thesaurus Linguae Latinae s. v. and Schulze, Lat. Eigennamen p. 130. It has been noted as the cognomen of a veteran serving in the VI Victrix perhaps before the removal of that legion to England during the principate of Hadrian. The stone was found at Remi in Belgium.

COGNOMINA OF PERSIAN ORIGIN

Persian names appear as cognomina in the names of legionary soldiers in the following cases: Arsaces, Δαρσεῖος, Mithridaticus, and Οὐαράνης. Arsaces is the cognomen of a soldier serving before the year 87. Δαρσεῖος is borne by a centurion serving in Syria in the years 224–225. The other two are found in inscriptions of uncertain date in the East.

COGNOMINA OF PHRYGIAN ORIGIN

Ascanius and Sabasianus are names from Phrygia. Ascanius is the cognomen of a centurion in service before the reign of Claudius. Sabasianus, which contains a reference to a Phrygian divinity, is borne by a soldier in Dalmatia whose period of enrollment is not definitely dated.

COGNOMINA OF PUNIC ORIGIN

(Vid. Jules Toutain, Les Cités romaines de la Tunisie, and Paul Schroeder, Die Phönizische Sprache.) Ten names of Punic

origin have been found in the names of Roman legionaries. These are Aris, Baricio, Birzil, Gududus, Gudullus, Hiddibal, Motthunus, Namfamo, Namphamo, and Nampulus. With the exception of Aris which is recorded in a Spanish inscription all the Punic names were found in Africa. Those which can be dated are later than the year 193. Baricio is preserved in four names. Two men having this cognomen were born in the camp at Lambaesis. Gudullus, a diminutive of Gududus, Hiddibal, and Namphamo are the cognomina of men born in camp. Sufetula is the birth-place of Motthunus. Namphamo corresponds to Latin Felix. Toutain op. cit. p. 176 and Clermont Ganneau Rec. d'Arch. or. 6 (1905) p. 120.) Nampulus is a diminutive of Namphamo.

The following names have been found in Africa and, though not Punic, may be of native origin: Buturarius, Gumasius, Guzabius, Mangala, Muerubius, Nimmira, and Porturitus. All these names appear during the third century. The names Aurassus and Thubunius are formations from place names which are probably of local origin. Numidius is a name of similar character. For Easuctanus cf. Iasucta, Schroeder op. cit. p. 91.

Further comment on the cognomina which are common among the soldiers of Africa will be found in Chap. III, The Cognomina of African Legionaries.

COGNOMINA OF SEMITIC ORIGIN

Names of Semitic origin found as cognomina in the names of soldiers are Beliabus, Eufratianus, Iamianus, Malchias, Malchus, Matthaius, Melcidianus, Maddanius, and Φαραίνος. These names are scattered in many provinces. The earliest is Matthaius, the name of a man whose first service was in the fleet; afterwards he was transferred to the I Adiutrix on its formation in the year 68. The other dated instances of names of this group are later than the first century.

COGNOMINA OF THRACIAN ORIGIN

Among the cognomina found in the names of Roman legionaries the following are of Thracian origin:

Auluentius	Bitus	Dizza	Mucatralis
Aulupor	Bytytralis	Dizze	Rescuporis
Aulutralis	Kόττος	Dizzo	Sita
Auluzanus	Deospor	Drigissa	Sudius
Auluzon	Dines	Eptacentus	Sudicentus
Bithus	Diza	Mucapor	Tarsa
Bito	Dizo	Mucatra

These twenty-seven names appear as cognomina in forty-six instances. (For Thracian names vid. Dumont, Mélanges, and Tomaschek, Die alten Thraker [complete titles in Bibliography].) Several other names present strong resemblances to Thracian names. Bethus is probably connected with Bithus. Daizo may well be related to Dizo. Surus and Surio are considered Thracian by Tomaschek, op. cit., and Celtic by Holder, cf. Cognomina of Celtic origin and Holder, altcelt. Sprachschatz. For Thithi cf. Θειθος in Tomaschek, op. cit. Index s. v. Andra is preserved on a stone in Syria together with the name Mucapor, cut in the early third century. Betto is either Thracian or Germanic (vid. Schönfeld in Bibliography, and cf. Bato, a cognomen of Illyrian origin).

Dazanus is related to Dasius, q. v., under cognomina ending in -ius, cf. (Dumont, op. cit. p. 551) Δαζάνος and may be Thracian in origin. Thiumpus is doubtfully Thracian.

Thracian names, as might be expected, have been found most frequently in the provinces of the Danube region. Nearly one-half of the instances are from this part of the Empire. Italy and Germany contribute nearly one-fourth each and a few Thracian names are found in Africa, but borne in at least three cases by men who are not natives of that province: Auluzanus is the name of a man born in Thrace. Napoca is the birthplace of men named Bitus and Tarsa.

If the name Surio be Thracian, then L. Icconius Surio whose home is Caesar Augusta, serving in Dalmatia in the period between 42 and 70, is the earliest soldier to bear a cognomen of Thracian origin. The principate of Antoninus Pius is the next period to which Thracian names may be assigned. The latest date when these names are found is in the beginning of the fourth century. A single military list in Moesia of the year 195 has preserved several Thracian names. All three examples of the name Bithus appear in this inscription. The name Mucatra is recorded three times on a stone in Germany cut in the year

223. Frequently both names are Thracian. Such names are found as Aulupor Alusa(ni filius?), Mucatralis Auluzanus, Bytytralis Biti (filius), Mucapor Mucatralis. Aurelius and Septimius are nomina joined with cognomina of Thracian origin. Septimius has been noted in seven names, Aurelius in twenty-six, nearly three-fourths of the whole number of examples of Thracian cognomina.

COGNOMINA OF UNCERTAIN ORIGIN

The following cognomina are certainly not of Roman or Italian origin but their derivation is obscure.

Acrinis	Fana	Labracenus	Saburianus
Arimo	Feanus	Mestula	Samunio
Canetus	Gerfennus	Mesuquas	Silamius
Cinnus	Glaus	Pertur	Sinna
Cittinus	Godes	Petunnatius	Stiminus
Colinus	Iassianus	Pitonatus	Thamarcus
Diabo	Iullinus	Rosinus	Ulpro

Glaus is perhaps for Greek Glaux a plant. Canetus is possibly related to Canethus.

COGNOMINA NOT ELSEWHERE CLASSIFIED

The following cognomina have not been mentioned in any of the preceding sections: Avos, Bassilas, Center, F(C)aricus, and -irmus. Avos is probably due to the loss of some letters; the original cognomen may have been Flavos. Bassilas is evidently related to Bassus. The name which is listed here as Center appears on the stone in the dative form Centro. The uncertainty of the name Faricus or Caricus has caused the insertion of this cognomen in this place. The cognomen -irmus is incomplete in the inscription and it is impossible to determine whether it should be restored as Firmus or Primus.

CHAPTER THREE.

SUPPLEMENTARY PARAGRAPHS

1. Double Cognomina.
2. The Earliest Cognomina.
3. The Cognomina of African Legionaries.
4. Legionary Cognomina in the Provinces of which the Inscriptions are published in CIL III.
5. Uncomplimentary Cognomina.
6. Similarity of the Nomen and Cognomen in the same name.
7. Imperial Nomina.

DOUBLE COGNOMINA

The several instances of the appearance of a supernomen have already been noted in the chapter devoted to the classification of cognomina, and this section comprises a collection of such instances with some further comment on them. For a general discussion of names containing a supernomen one should consult the work of Lambertz, Zur Ausbreitung des Supernomen oder Signum im roemischen Reiche, Glotta, 1913, IV, p. 78-143, V, p. 99-169.

L. Cornelius Cato qui et Caligatus is the name of a centurion of the III Augusta at Lambaesis, probably about the year 200, certainly so if the name L. Cornelius Cato, designating an optio at the same camp, refers to the same person. The supernomen Caligatus reminds us at once of the name Caligula applied to the Emperor C. Caesar Germanicus. Domaszewski, A. E. M. 10 (1886) pp. 23-25, does not regard Caligatus as a part of the centurion's name but as a true participle. "Denn ich glaube, dass Caligatus hier nicht als Cognomen verstanden werden darf." Lambertz, Glotta, IV, p. 101 and Cagnat, L'Armée Romaine, 2nd ed. p. 301, n. 8, consider Caligatus as a supernomen. The name of this centurion's father also contains a supernomen: M. Cornelius Cato qui et Aurassius. On this name Cagnat remarks,

'Le sobriquet du père, Aurassius, indique qu'il était originaire des environs de Lambése ou tout au moins d'un village de l'Aurès. Aurassus has already been found in the name of a legionary at Lambaes. Cagnat believes that M. Cornelius Cato, the elder, was attached to the legion in some capacity, but in the absence of definite information his name has not been added to this list.

Another inscription in Africa preserves the name C. Tannonus Felix qui et Aquensis borne by a soldier whose period of service can not be definitely dated, but it is probably later than the reign of Hadrian. Lambertz, Glotta IV p. 101, observes "Aquensis Bezeichnung nach seiner Herkunft, also eine Art Spitzname, jedenfalls sein Rufname." The cognomen Aquileiensis has been found in the name of a legionary at Lambaes during the reign of Alexander Severus (222-235). He was born at Theveste.

In the general region of the Danube provinces there are four instances of a supernomen in the names of legionaries whose period of service was probably later than the first century. These are, Salonius Sabinianus signo Scammatus, Nonius Salonus qui et signo Dalmatis, Aurelius Secundianus qui et Itrius, and P. Aelius Septimius Audeus qui et Maximus. The relation between the cognomen, Salonus, and the supernomen, Dalmatis, has already been noted in commenting on the cognomen in Chap. II, Cognomina with geographical significance. Audeus has been mentioned in the first section of Chapter II devoted to cognomina suited to men in military service. For the double nomen Aelius Septimius cf. other cases in this section below, On the name Itrius, Lambertz says. "Keltisch oder illyrisch ist das Supernomen des Aur. Secundianus qui et Itrius. The formation of names in -ius during the later period of the Empire has been noted by Lambertz in the article already cited and by Diehl, Rh. Mus. 62, and both Itrius and Scammatus are names of this kind. In view of the uncertainty concerning the derivation of Itrius is it not possible that what we have here is a comic formation from the word iterum to accompany the cognomen Secundianus, cf. Dalmatis with Salonus above? The name L. Decrius Julianus qui et Numisianus found at Naples is dated in the first half of the second century. The following names in Greek are taken from inscriptions in Syria and Arabia: Γ. Σήιος Ἀττικὸς ὁ καλούμενος Μοσχᾶς and M. Κοκκήιος Γερμανὸς ὁ καὶ

'Αουεῖδος. In the former case both names are of Greek origin, in the latter, the supernomen 'Αουεῖδος is a native name and not a transliteration of the Latin Avidus, Ins. Gr. ad Res Rom. Pert. III 1282, 'Αουεῖδος nomen non ex latino Avidus sed ex nabataeo Aoueida dictum, and Prentice, Gr. and Lat. Ins. p. 239. In a third name 'Αυσήιος Μάξιμος αύτὸς Ἀχιλεύς, the cognomen is Latin and the supernomen which seems appropriate to a soldier is of Greek origin.

The name T. Flavius super Cepula Scaenicus exhibits a form which is thus far without parallels. The veteran who bore this name is recorded as serving in the XXX Ulpia victrix at Lyons in the year 207. The position of the words, super Cepula, between the nomen and cognomen is not usual. Cepula is found as a supernomen in Christian names, vid. Lambertz, Glotta, IV, p. 86f, and Diehl, Rh. Mus. 62 p. 395f. From the meaning of the word Cepula, "little onion," one might suppose that we have the veteran's nickname in this word. "Super" may be an abbreviation for the word supernomen. The word supernomen is used as the means of indicating a second cognomen, apparently the equivalent of the words "qui et" or "signo," e. g., on a stone found at Milan, CIL V 6260, B. M. Quirace supernomen Micinæs, etc., cited by Lambertz, Glotta, IV, p. 85.

Another inscription found in the province Lugudunensis reads Melius Gervinius mlt Nervinus. The name Nervinus is a word of Celtic origin, but the connection with the other parts of this centurion's name is not wholly clear. If the letters mlt may be interpreted as standing for the word militavit, then it would seem that Nervinus is the name which the centurion bore during his period of service in the legion. The date of the inscription is uncertain.

The cognomen which appears in the alphabetical list as Carius aut Caristus appears in two inscriptions referring to the same person, one in Latin reading Carius, the other in Greek reading Xάριστος. Carius is corrected to Carinus by Cumont, Studia Pontica, III (1910) 269, p. 241, who explains the difference between the Latin and Greek forms of the cognomen in this way, "Ulpadius Carinus——entrant au service militaire avait latinisé son nom grec de Charistos." Cumont believes this centurion was enrolled during the reign of Trajan.

In addition to these instances where a second cognomen is added with the words qui et or signo, etc., there are some examples of what may be called a second cognomen placed after the usual cognomina without any connecting word. This additional cognomen often indicates the town from which the man who bears the name probably came. The earliest example of this is in the name Q. Annaeus Balbus Faventinus of the tribe Pollia, borne by a meiles of the fifth legion in Africa before the year 70. M. Petronius Classicus Marrucinus is the name of a centurion in the VIII Augusta in Pannonia. This legion was stationed at Poetovio, where this inscription was found, before the principate of Nero and this officer may have served in the early period. Cn. Terentius Rufus Iguvinus is the name of a soldier of the III Augusta perhaps before the legion went to Lambaesis during the reign of Hadrian. An inscription at Cemenelum reads P. Enistalius P. f. Cl. Paternus Cemenelensis and these words were cut after the year 87. Another stone in Pannonia preserves the name Q. Frendullus Rufus Vicetinus borne by a legionary in service after the first century, cf. CIL VII 155, M. Petronius L. f. Men(enia) Vie(etinus) A soldier in Cilicia later than the reign of Trajan is named Γ. Ἰούλιος Λεωνίδης Ἀθηναῖος. Q. Moneius Verecundus Narbonensis is the name of a veteran found in an inscription of uncertain date in Spain. The fourth part of the name of Q. Aurelius Processus Maddanius, an optio at Lambaesis, may contain a reference to his birth-place or to an earlier name of Semitic origin.

Another group of names is composed of those which have two cognomina one of which ends in -ianus. At Lambaesis a centurion of five legions has the name I(ulius) Bassus Sulpicianus; his period of service is later than the reign of Septimius Severus. A veteran at the same place bears the name P. Granius Auctus Caesennianus; the inscription is not dated. Q. Papius Saturninus Julianus is the name of a centurion of the II Parthica, a legion formed by Septimius Severus. An inscription in England preserves a veteran's name, L. Ecimius Bellicianus Vitalis; whose period of service is not dated. One legionary in Syria can boast of a second nomen as well as a additional cognomen. The name in question is, following the order of words on the stone, M. Αὐρήλιος Σέντιος Ματωρ Ζηγδωρος the son of Ζηγδωρος Ματωρ.

While it is digressing from the strict province of cognomina to discuss nomina, the last mentioned inscription contains a name with two nomina and several similar cases can be found among the names of men enrolled in the legions. In so far as these names can be dated they belong to the third century. The most noteworthy case of a name having two nomina is Aurelius qui et Septimius Constantinus borne by a soldier in Pannonia whose period of service is later than the first century. For the formation of the name vid. Lambertz, Glotta, IV, p. 132. This inscription preserves several names of this kind. The nomina Aurelius and Septimius were adopted by the children of parents who bore these names. Aurelius Superinius Marcus is the name of a legionary in Germany in the year 214. Vibius Cassius Victorinus designates a beneficiarius consularis in Noricum in the year 215. A centurion in Syria in the year 212 bears the name M. Aurelius Valerius Valerianus.

(M.) Αὐρήλιος Οὐλπίος Σερρῆνος is the name of a soldier in Arabia about the year 215. The name P. Aelius Septimius Mucapor is borne by a centurion at Carnuntum during the reign of Alexander Severus (222-235). M. Aurelius Cocceius Florianus was a primus pilus at Vienna about the year 225. T. Aurelius Antonius Longinus is the name of a speculator of the III Gallica in Syria in the third century. The following cases are certainly later than the reign of Trajan: P. Aelius Septimius Audeus qui et Maximus (for the cognomen Audeus vid. Chap. II, Adjectives denoting qualities suited to men in military service), his son(?) Aelius Septimius Romanus and Valerius Vibius Valerianus (Note comment in CIL III 823, Vibii nomen miles fortasse derivavit ab imp. C. Vibio Treboniano Gallo, 251-253). C. Atilius Livius Victorianus is the name of a veteran of the III Augusta at Lambaesis in the period after the reign of Hadrian. M. Flavius Caecilius Telesphorianus was enrolled in the V Macedonica at Lambaesis; the inscription is not definitely dated. L. Veratius Aufidius Rufus, a centurion of the XXII Primigenia, seems to indicate Beneventum as his native town but this restoration of the place-name is not wholly certain. The name of a centurion of the III Cyrenaica in Belgica, Q. Cattus Libo Nepos, is puzzling and no satisfactory explanation has been made. Libo (vid. Chapter II, Cognomina ending in -o), and Nepos are apparently cognomina. What is to be said of the name Aelius Ant. Aeternalis? Ant is explained as Antonius in A. E. M. XIX,

p. 87, but the Index to CIL III throws no light on its interpretation. The inscription was found in Moesia and is not dated.

Another small group of names seems to present a peculiar form of praenomina, unless it also is to be understood as a part of the group which shows two nomina. The names so used are Claudio, Flavio, and Iulio. The complete names read as follows: Cl. Atteius Celer in Dacia; the inscription is later than the year 142; Cl. Maximius Sabinus (Sabinus is the reading of the stone according to the Index on CIL VIII, Cagnat, L'Armée Romaine 1st ed p. 202, reads Sabinianus.); Fl. Sabinus Attillus, Fl. Iulius Maternus, Fl. Iulius Reginus, the names of three brothers; the inscription is later than the year 89; Fl. Antonius Romanus, the name of a soldier in the year 218; Iul. Licinius Sanctinus, Iul. Marcius Saecularis, and Iul. Val. Valentinus, the name of a veteran about the year 134. The occurrence of Statius Popius Saturninus, the name of a centurion whose term of service may have been in the latter half of the century, suggests that Statius may still retain its early force as a praenomen, but this reading of Statius is not without question. M. Uttedius Sallubianus C. Petilius Amandus who was born at Iguvium and is recorded as a veteran in Dalmatia has two complete names. The cognomen Sallubianus is Celtic in its origin. The date of the inscription is not known. L. Cassius Clemens Taurus is not an example of a name with two cognomina for what appears to be a second cognomen is the engraver's error for Taurin(o), vid. CIL XIII 8732 and Ephem. Epigr. V p. 220.

THE EARLIEST COGNOMINA

In the earliest period men of the rank of soldiers or under-officers did not have any cognomen. The reign of Claudio is generally taken as the turning point, before which cognomina are rare and after which it is unusual to find them omitted from a name. (Schulze, Lateinische Eigennamen, p. 497, "Denn im Allgemeinen ist die Sitte des persönlichen Cognomens schon etwas früher (i. e., than the reign of Trajan), unter Claudio und Nero allgemein durchgedrungen und rasch auch obligatorisch geworden." W. Baehr, De Centurionibus Legionariis, p. 22, "Itaque sub Claudio edictum videtur, ut militum in latereulis, codicillis, aliis libellis publiciis cognomina quoque adscriberentur, id quod milites in titulis privatis statim imitatos esse consentaneum est." Cf. CIL XIII 1121, Kubitschek, Pauly-Wissowa 3:1601, E. Bormann, A. E. M. 18, p. 223, K. Patsch, A. E. M. 14, p. 103, Siebourg, Bonn. Jahrb. 107 (1901), p. 187f.

Several names have been found which contain a cognomen borne by legionaries whose period of service is earlier than the reign of Claudius. There is a group of cognomina preserved on stones found in Italy which probably were cut during the reign of Augustus. Some seem to belong to men who served in the battle of Actium and were retired later on land given to them at Ateste. Some of these names lack a cognomen altogether. One name, M. Billienus M. f. Rom., adds the word Actiacus in the place of a cognomen. While this is a cognomen in form, it has not been listed as such in the Index Cognominum of CIL V, and that precedent has been followed in the present collection. The following names of this group contain a cognomen: C. Titius Magnus and M. Tudius Niger of the V Urbana, C. Aebutius Rufus of the XIth legion and L. Labicius Celer of the VI Ferrata; the inscription containing Celer was found at Beneventum. M. Verrius Celsus is the name of a centurion whose term of service should probably be assigned to the reign of Augustus.

By far the earliest laterculus of soldiers is that found in Coptos, Egypt (CIL III 6627). This inscription has been dated by the editor, Mommsen, in the reign of Augustus. The list given on this stone contains seventy-two names, thirty-six are the names of soldiers, an equal number are names of centurions. No soldier's name has a cognomen. Of the names of the centurions twenty-two have no cognomen, Mommsen says twenty-three, but only twenty-two are indexed as nomina in CIL III while fourteen are indexed as cognomina. (Cotus may have been considered a nomen by Mommsen.) In this number we have some of the earliest testimony on the matter of cognomina in the names of legionaries. Of the fourteen cognomina, nine are adjectives in form: Castus, Clemens, Firmus, Flaccus, Iustus, Longus (?), Maternus, Rufus, and Varus. Servatus is a participial adjective, Aquila is a noun, Galba and Varus are names well known at Rome. Cotus is a name of Celtic origin.

Two men of the XXXth legion and both belonging to the tribe Stellatina saw service in this early period, possibly before the beginning of our era. Their names are M. Crassicus Castellus and P. Clodius Pius. T. Atidius Porcio, a soldier of the XIIth legion at Ateste, must have served about the year 9 A. D. because this legion disappeared at this time. Γάιος Αἰμίλιος Γέμινος, a centurion of the VIIth legion in Asia Minor belongs to the year 11-12 A. D. Salvius Febranus Baculus is the name of a centurion of the XXth legion in Dalmatia at the opening of the century. C. (?) Iulius Albus, a soldier of the IIId legion and his centurion, Laenas, in Aquitania have been assigned to the period before the year 21 A. D. by Allmer, CIL XIII 1122. Other names which belong to men in service during the reign of Tiberius are T. Iulius Festus borne by a soldier in the XVIth legion at Nemausus, P. Aelius Optatus and L. Antonius Quadratus, two names of men enrolled in the XXth legion in Italy, and M. Vibrius Marcellus borne by a centurion of the XVIth legion at Rome. T. Flavius Titullus of the tribe Stellatina serving in the XXth legion is mentioned in an undoubtedly early inscription at Beneventum. A group of inscriptions earlier than the reign of Claudius is found in Dalmatia preserving the names of men enrolled in the VIIth and XIth legions. Another also in this early period is found in Germany with the names of men belonging to the XVIth legion. About twenty names altogether can be assigned to the period before the reign of Claudius. From the reign of this Emperor to the end of the first century between 350 and 400 names can be definitely dated. There are others, of course, to which exact dates can not be given, although they may belong to the first century.

Some characteristics of the names of the first century have already been noted in separate sections of Chapter II. These may be recalled here briefly: The cognomina of the first century are for the most part adjectives. Nouns are not infrequent. Cognomina ending in -ianus are found in a few names. Nomina of Roman gentes are rarely used as cognomina. Cognomina of Greek origin are occasionally employed; other names of foreign origin are not common during the first century. The cognomina which are found in five or more names belonging to this century are Bassus, Celer, Firmus, Fronto, Optatus, Priscus, Proculus, Pudens, Rufus, Saturninus, Saturninus, Secundus (nineteen examples), Severus, Silvanus, Valens, Verecundus, Verus, and Vitalis.

NOTE: In regard to the omission of cognomina it can be said that an examination of over 350 inscriptions which contain the names of legionaries without a cognomen

THE COGNOMINA OF AFRICAN LEGIONARIES

More than one-third of the names of men who served in the legions have been found on African soil and the large number of cognomina in these possess certain features which are noteworthy. G. Boissier (Revue des Deux Mondes, 1895, p. 56, vid. also "Roman Africa") summarizes the practice of assigning names among the Africans by saying that some adopted names such as Maurus, Gaetulus, and Numida. Others contented themselves by translating their Punic or Berber names "par un a-peu-près latin." The boldest spirits adopted an entirely new name or took a name from some famous Roman family. Mommsen (Ephemeris Epigraphica, Cognomina Africana, IV, p. 520-524) has mentioned some distinctive points in the formation of cognomina in Africa, chiefly the ending -osus. Among the soldiers cognomina with this ending are rare; those found are Albosus, Barosus, Bonosus, and Fructuosus. (Apricosus is found in a name in Italy.) Vid. Renier, Mélanges d'Epigraphie, pp. 273-284. There are also several cognomina which are Punic in origin in the names of African soldiers. These have been discussed in Chapter II, Cognomina of Punic Origin. (The Roman inscriptions from Africa have preserved many Punic names, some in the names of peregrini and slaves, others as cognomina for Roman citizens outside of the legions. These are similar to the names in Semitic inscriptions. They appear in Africa from the beginning of the Roman dominion to the latest Christian times.)

The most striking characteristic about the cognomina from Africa which are dealt with here is the unexpected frequency has shown that about three-fourths of these can be assigned to the period before the close of the reign of Claudius. On several stones cut during the first half of the first century one with a cognomen will be found by the side of another name which lacks it. The absence of a cognomen is not certain proof, however, that the inscription should be dated earlier than the reign of Claudius, but it creates a probability in favor of an early date. Cf. W. Baehr, op. cit. p. 20f. Two names lacking a cognomen are worthy of mention because of the late date; M. Antonius M. filius is the name of a veteran at Aquileia of the I Adiutrix, a legion formed in the year 68. His father has the cognomen Vettianus; he is not enrolled in the legions. M. Titurius Gai filius natione Italus is the name of a soldier of the II Traiana at Alexandria in Egypt. The II Traiana, as the name indicates, was formed by the Emperor Trajan and consequently M. Titurius can not have served before the year 98.

of names in the form of past participles. The use of participles as cognomina is by no means confined to this region, but it is among the names of soldiers at Lambaesis that this form of cognomen appears commonly enough to be considered popular. Several cognomina in participial form have been found often enough to be included with the "popular" cognomina of Chapter I.

The majority of the instances under all these names came from Africa. The cognomina are Datus (22)* 20, Donatus (68) 62, Emeritus (23) 16, Honoratus (30) 27, Optatus (34) 19, and Rogatus (44) 42. (Rogatianus has been noted in African inscriptions only.) Other cognomina in this form which have been found in Africa only are Ampliatus, Collatus, Concessus (four examples), Exoratus, Extricatus (seven examples), Meritus, Potitus, Privatus, Processus (six examples), and Renuntiatus. Restutus, Speratus, and Successus are also more frequent in Africa than elsewhere. The present participle Crescens (50) 27 is the only present participial form to be found in Africa. (cf. Caligatus, Chapter III, Double Cognomina, vid. also Chapter II, Participial Adjectives.)

The peculiarities of Roman names in Africa have already been observed by Jules Toutain (Les Cités romaines de la Tunisie. Essai sur l'Histoire de la Colonisation romaine dans l'Afrique du Nord. Bibliothèque des Écoles françaises d'Athènes et de Rome, fascicule 72, livre II, chapitre premier, "La Nomenclature et l'Onomastique," pp. 184-186), R. Cagnat (Journal des Savants, Mai 1896, pp. 259-272), Rudolf Herzog (Namensübersetzungen und Verwandtes, Philologus LXI, 1897, pp. 33-70), and G. Boissier (Revue des deux Mondes, 1895, p. 56). On Donatus, Toutain writes, "L'idée exprimée par le mot latin "Donatus" paraît bien avoir été identique à celle que rendaient les mots puniques Iatan et Mattan: Iatansidi signifait Sed dedit—Mattanelim = donum deorum etc." Toutain compares the French name "Dieudonne" to the Latin "Donatus." Herzog mentions with Donatus the following names, Dativus, Datullus, Datianus, and Donatianus, which are to be found in the present collection, and Adeodatus. He adds, "Donatus ist vor der afrikanischen

* The number given in parenthesis refers to the total number found, the second number refers to those from Africa.

Namengabung nicht (cf. CIL I, 1, 866) und ausserhalb derselben selten nachzuweisen. Wir können also von diesem Cognomen behaupten, dass es in Africa geschaffen worden sei, übrigens zunächst nicht von den Vollnamen aus, sondern von den in CIL VIII häufigsten Kurznamen Muttun, Methun, Methen, etc. (Toutain, p. 169, 173) die eben nichts anderes bedeuten als Donatus. Man sollte meinen, dass die Doppelnamen mit qui et oder signo die Cognomina einer Familie leicht Uebersetzung konstatieren lassen, aber trotz eifrigen Suchens nach dieser Hinsicht hat sich mir sehr wenig ergeben, so CIL VIII 169—Valerius Donatus filius eorum et Valerius Muthunus frater eius." On Rogatus, Toutain remarks, "Les cognomina Rogatus et Rogatianus, qui étaient aussi très populaires en cette région (Tunisie), dérivent sans aucun doute d'une idée religieuse et morale, l'idée de prière." With Rogatus, Herzog mentions Optatus, Impetratus, etc., and explains the significance of the names as "das (von Gott) gewünschte, erbetene, erlangte Kind, könnte vielleicht kombiniert werden mit Sama '(baal), B(aal) hat (die Bitte) erhört, Jazanel Gott hat erhört, etc." Herzog connects Honoratus with Kabdat, or Kebuddat, cf. Kabedmelqart and Chubud. On the cognomen Extricatus vid. Clermont-Ganneau, Recueil d'Archéologie orientale, I, 1898, p. 165f. It seems probable, then, that this particular form of word was considered an equivalent of names in the Semitic language and the significance of the names contributed to their popularity.

Other cognomina popular not only in the ranks of the III Augusta legion, but elsewhere in Africa, are Faustus, Felix, Fortunatus, and Victor. These names appear to be especially suited to men in the military calling, because names of good omen may bring the bearer good luck. Men in other occupations in this province seem to have been ready to avail themselves of whatever good fortune an auspicious name might bring. The widespread use of these names prevents any supposition that they were particularly sought after by the legionaries. In regard to Felix attention was called in Chapter I to the fact that it is considered the Latin equivalent of the Punic name Namphamo. (Cf. Cagnat op. cit. supra, "Il en est de même du mot phénicien Namphamo, qui signifie, d'après saint Augustin, boni pedis homo, id est cuius adventus adferat aliquid felicitatis, de Gadnaam qui offre à peu près le même sens et exprime aussi une idée de bonne chance. Le latin avait divers mots pour rendre la même pensée: les Fortunatus, les Faustus, les Felix sont des Gadnaam, des Namphamo déguisés.” Herzog compares Benedicta, Eutyches, Faustus, Felix, Fortunatus, and their related forms with the Punic Namphamo and Naamgad or Gadnaam in their various forms. Baric- and its cognate forms he considers names of good fortune also.) It is altogether probable that other names are translations of Punic names in common use and this fact would explain the popularity of the Latin form of the name. Herzog connects the cognomen Adiutor with the name Azrubaal or Hasdrubal; “help of Baal” or “Baal helps.” The following equivalents are pointed out by the same authority. Hospes, Hospita, and Hospitalis are related to Ger, Fremdling, Schutzbefohlener einer Gottheit. Hilarus and its derivatives together with Laetus he finds are to be connected with Simhat. He suggests Hagg(a)i as the equivalent of Festus and in a footnote adds that Pudens may be a translation of a Berber name, Juzula or Juzala.

Martialis is another cognomen popular in Africa. It is a desirable name for soldiers and this fact quite as much as its religious import may have led to its frequent use. Outside of military circles the name is in common use, so that the religious significance may have been the predominating factor in determining its use. In commenting on Martialis Herzog says, “Das sehr häufige Cognomen Martialis können wir nicht gut unterbringen, da ein entsprechenden punischer Gott nicht zu Gebot steht. Dagegen wird das häufige und wie es scheint, in Africa entstandene Venerius, -a, -e, -osa, Aphrodisius, -a, auf Astarte zurückzuführen sein.” There are two other names in which the religious idea was one of the causes of their popularity. These are Ianuarius and Saturninus. The frequency of the former as a cognomen in the names of soldiers is noted by Gottanka (Epigraphische Beiträge, Geburtstagecognomina). For the prevalence of the name Saturninus Toutain advances the following explanation: “Cette préférence des Africaines de l'époque impériale s'explique par la faveur dont jouissait auprès d'eux le culte du dieu Saturne: Or le Saturne d'Afrique était, non pas le Cronos de la mythologie grecque ou le Saturnus des legendes italiques, mais l'antique Baal carthaginois. (Toutain op. cit. p. 183, and Toutain, De Saturni dei in Africa romana cultu, pp. 59-62). Saturninus is then, according to Toutain, an equivalent of a compound with the Punic name Baal and in giving this cognomen to their children, "ils (i. e., the parents) les mettaient en quelque manière sous la protection de cette divinité." Herzog reviews this explanation and comments as follows: "Saturninus ist ein altrömisches Cognomen, nicht erst von den Punieren geschaffen. Doch ist es in den anderen Theilen des Reichs und bei echten Römern viel seltener. Ob wir alle Composita mit Baal als zu Saturninus geworden annehmen sollen, ist doch fraglich, da die punischen Kurznamen zeigen, dass das Individualle meist nicht der Gottesname, sondern der andere Bestandtheil ist. Wie also Ἀφροδίσιος, Ἀπολλώνιος, Ζήνων, Σεραπίων, etc. sich auf Geschenk- und Widmungsnamen beschränken werden, so wohl auch Saturninus auf Namen wie Baaljatan, Jatanbaal, Maharbaal, Abibaal, etc." Some other names frequent in Africa are Maximus, Primus, and Secundus, but these are almost colorless and as far as the army goes the numerical superiority of Africa in the number of instances of their use is not marked.

Toutain in the chapter already referred to calls attention to the emphasis placed upon the cognomen among the Africans and observes that they are distinguished from the Romans in that respect. He believes that the cognomina which are preferred by the Punic people are really an expression of their own soul and genius.

It is interesting to observe that in another section of the Roman world from which the names of soldiers have come down to us in large numbers there are "popular" names different from those in Africa. In the Danube provinces and Eastern Mediterranean the names Firmus, Severus, and Valens are found frequently. Perhaps these cognomina were not liked by the peoples of Northern Africa and consequently were little used.

The importance of the cognomen in African names is a fact which should be borne in mind in this connection where this part of the name is the object of attention. Since we can feel sure that cognomina were not given without taking into consideration the significance of the word one need not be accused of drawing on one's fancy in seeking to interpret the meaning of cognomina in the names of African soldiers serving in Roman legions.

LEGIONARY COGNOMINA IN THE PROVINCES OF WHICH THE INSCRIPTIONS ARE PUBLISHED IN CIL III

The awkwardness of this heading is excused by its convenience, since the inscriptions from these regions have been massed together and contrasted with the African group. The cognomina from the provinces of CIL III constitute a little less than one-third of the whole number, while those from Africa amount to more than one-third of the total.

The names which enjoy a special popularity are either adjectives or cognomina well known among the Romans in Italy. In the former class Valens, Severus, and Firmus are excellent examples.* Other common names are Celer, Clemens, Longus, Longinus, Priscus, Pudens, and Verus. For the numerical distribution of all these names vid. table at the end of Chapter I.

In the second class one should note Bassus, Capito, and Fronto.† Slightly different are the names Marcellinus, Marcellus, and Marciānus. Like the last mentioned name are Julianus and Valerianus. Rufus is a common name in these countries. Sabinus and Germanus which have little geographical significance (cf. Chap. I, s. v.) are frequent in these parts of the Empire. Proculus has a popularity not easy to account for, but its use among the soldiers may well have been due to its employment in the names of men of high rank. Alexander is the only Greek name which seems to have been popular. The majority of the instances are found in the Eastern provinces and in the Danube region.

UNCOMPLIMENTARY COGNOMINA

As might be expected, those cognomina which for one reason or another would be undesirable are not often found. If a man

---

* Prof. D. R. Stuart has kindly informed me that Valens or Οὐάλης is a popular name in Arabia. This popularity is due to the fact that Valens is a natural transcription of the Arabic Wal or Wal 'a, vid. P.A.E.S. No. 358. Severus is also one of the most common names in Arabia and Syria. Vid. Chalot, Index to Waddington-Le Bas.

† Βάστος (spelled also Βάστος) is especially frequent in Arabia—the natural transliteration of Baz̄s or Baz̄s vid. Stuart. P.A.E.S. No. 281, 282.

bore a nickname of that kind it is likely that he had at the same time a dignified cognomen and it is the latter which appears in the military list and on the gravestone. It is reasonable to suppose that uncomplimentary names were current among men in military life, but these names have now almost entirely perished.

There are four cognomina which should be mentioned under this heading and which may very well have been given to the persons concerned out of a dislike which grew up in some way. These cognomina were adopted by their bearers and have been preserved up to the present day. They are Barbarus, Mucco, Mutilus, and Sterceius. About the significance of the last name there can be no uncertainty. Mutilus causes the editor of the inscription (CIL XIII 8591) some anxiety, but the reading and the meaning of the cognomen seem to be certain. Barbarus is found in the name of a legionary at Carnuntum whose term of service may have been before the year 63; if not, it was certainly during the first century. Barbarus is the cognomen in three names of men at Lambaesis. Two of the men were enrolled in the third century and the third served later than the reign of Hadrian. The early use and the late instances point to the conclusion that Barbarus as a cognomen may refer to some distinguishing quality of the men who bore it. Mucco is probably derived from Muccus (vid. Forcellini-DeVit, Onomasticon). Such a word would scarcely have been applied as a cognomen unless it had been appropriate to the bearer.

It is tempting to add other names to this list but it may not be wise to venture too far in the interpretation of cognomina when we know so little about the circumstances under which they were given.

SIMILARITY OF THE NOMEN AND COGNOMEN IN THE SAME NAME

It will be observed that there are many names which have a nomen and cognomen formed on the same stem. In several names the cognomen has been formed by the addition of the ending -ianus. Nearly all the dated examples of names of this kind can be assigned to the third century. The combination which is found most frequently is the nomen Iulius with the cognomen Iulianus; thirteen cases of the name Iulius Iulianus have been collected. The earliest instance of this name occurs in the case of a centurion in Egypt before the year 108. Valerius Valerianus is recorded as the name of five legionaries, and the earliest of all the names of this kind is Valerius Valerianus, borne by a soldier of the XI Claudia in Dalmatia in the period between the year 42 and the reign of Vespasian. Claudius Claudianus is preserved in five names; four of these can be assigned to the third century. Aelius Aelianus and Aurelius Aurelianus appear in two names each; one of the former is dated in the year 228, and one of the latter about the year 253. Other instances of this kind are Flavius Flavianus, the son of a Flavinus (undated) L. Marinius Marinianus (the name of a man serving during the reign of Alexander Severus), Nepotinius Nepotianus (227), Geminius Geminianus (undated), Octavius Octavianus (undated), Pontius Pontianus (155), Rutilius Rutilianus (undated), Severius Severianus (238-244), Sittius Sittianus (200), Successus Successianus (third century?), Terentius Terentianus (about 212), and Vereius Vereianus (about 202).

In some names the cognomen has the ending -inus. These are Catullius Catullinus (undated), Ingenius Ingenuinus (239), Marcellinius Marcellinus (after 170), and Rufinius Rufinus (undated). Another variety is shown in the Augustius Augustalis borne by a man whose period of service is later than the year 89.

In a few cases the cognomen is not altered, but the nomen may perhaps have been formed to be appropriate to the cognomen. In the name L. Fabius Fab(i)us we seem to have the nomen used directly as the cognomen. This is the only example which has been found in the present collection of names. The birth-place of the legionary bearing this name is Nertobriga and his period of service was before the reign of Vespasian. Felicius Felix (undated), C. Masculinius Masculus (undated), Placidius Placidus (222-35), Primanius Primulus (after 89), Severius Severus (about 212) are the names in this group. In the name Silvanius Silvester the nomen and cognomen have a similar meaning in addition to their likeness in form. The relation between the nomen and cognomen in the name Voconius Vitulus has been pointed out by Otto Keller, Lateinische Volksetymologie (Leipzig 1891) p. 115. The nomen Voconius is also spelled Vacconius from vacco, cf. vitulus. The name Secundius Primus shows its peculiarity through contrast between the nomen and cognomen. The soldier who bears this name was born at Tubunae and served in the III Augusta at Lambaesis.

IMPERIAL NOMINA

The words of Mommsen (Hermes XIX p. 3, quoted in Introduction, q. v.) have prompted these paragraphs on the appearance in the names of legionaries of the nomina used in the names of Emperors.

Aelius. The nomen Aelius is rarely found in names which can be dated in the first century. Two brothers, veterans in the XVIth legion in Germany (the stone was found at Rome), who bear the nomen Aelius were in service before the reign of Claudius probably. The home of these men is Brixia, and they have no cognomen. P. Aelius Optatus, is the name of a soldier in the XXth legion whose term of enrollment has been assigned to this early period before Claudius, but not with certainty. Aelius Asclepiades is the name of a soldier in the IXth legion who served during the first century. The stone was found at Puteoli. In the second century an inscription at Troesmis in Moesia containing a list of veterans which can be dated about the year 134 does not preserve the name Aelius. (CIL III 6178). A similar inscription at Viminacium also in Moesia cut in the year 135 records the nomen Aelius fourteen times in thirty-four lines. (CIL III 8110.) A laterculus of soldiers at Almus in Moesia which is dated in the year 155 has eight instances of the name Aelius. (CIL III 7449.) Vid. Cagnat, L'Armée Romaine, 2d. ed., p. 293. An inscription at Lambaesis belonging to the reign of Hadrian contains no use of Aelius.

Aurelius. The nomen Aurelius is found three times without a cognomen in the early period: A? Aurelius, the name of a veteran from Bononia serving in the 1st legion (CIL XIII 8276); C. Aurelius of the tribe Quirina, the name of a veteran of the XIth legion in Achaia (CIL III 503); and M. Aurelius, the name of a soldier of the XIV Gemina at Aquileia (CIL V 8272). L. Aurelius Celer is the name of a soldier of the XV Apollinaris at Carnuntum perhaps before the year 63, certainly during the first century. The name L. Aurelius Rufus designates a primus pilus of the XVIth legion whose term of service seems to be earlier than the reign of Vespasian. Aurelius Rufus is the name of a soldier in Dalmatia who apparently was enrolled in the XI Claudia and consequently his term of service falls between the years 42 and 70 when the legion was assigned to this province.

Aurelius Verus and Aurelius Vitalis are names of men in the same province and also belong to the early period. M. Aurelius Metelus from Alba Pompeia is the name of a soldier of the IV Macedonica (disbanded by Vespasian) at Mainz. Three other instances of the use of the nomen Aurelius can be dated before the reign of Hadrian. The military laterculi referred to under Aelius are important also for the use of Aurelius. In Moesia it is found once on the stone cut in the year 135 and seventeen times on that cut in the year 155. In Lambaesis Aurelius does not appear in any soldier's name before the year 162. From the middle of the second century it is found frequently.

Flavius. The nomen Flavius is found first in a military list assigned to the reign of Augustus recovered in Coptos, Egypt, (CIL III 6627); the name in question is P. Flavius from Paphos: the cognomen is lacking from all names of soldiers on this stone (vid. The Earliest Cognomina, in this chapter.). T. Flavius also without a cognomen is the name of a soldier at Theveste probably in the latter half of the first century. The cognomen Viator is found on this inscription. T. Flavius Titullus of the tribe Stellatina designates a member of the XXth legion who served before the region of Claudius; the stone was found at Beneventum (CIL IX 1608). T. Flavius Secundus is the name of a custos armorum, born in camp, serving in the XV Apollinaris at Carnuntum perhaps before the year 63. The name Flavius becomes common in the names of soldiers much earlier than Aelius and Aurelius. On a papyrus from the Fayoum which can be dated in the reign of Domitian (81-90) it occurs seven times. (Pap Gen Lat I). The nomen is used with great frequency throughout the second and third centuries.

Septimius. The use of the nomen Septimius before the reign of Septimius Severus is rare among the men enrolled in the legions. L. Septimius, the name of a soldier of the V Macedonica, is the only instance without a cognomen and also the only one which can be assigned to the period before the reign of Claudius. (Westd. Zeitschr., 21, n. 212.) The only other instance which has been noted earlier than the year 193 is in the name Septimius Celer borne by a verteran, also of the V Macedonica, in Moesia about the year 134. L. Septimius Cassianus is assigned to the reign of Septimius Severus, vid. Roemische Limes, II (1901) p. 145 note. A long list of veterans found at Viminacium of the year 195 contains no case of the nomen Septimius. This nomen is not a common one in the camp at Lambaesis.

Ulpius. Only two examples of the nomen Ulpius in the names of legionaries have been found which could be dated in the first century and one of these is not without question. The inscription (CIL III 2833) containing the questionable name reads P. Ulpius D. f. Silvester (changing to the nominative case) and so the editors of this volume have indexed the nomen as Ulpius. Patsch (Arch. epigr. Untersuchungen II, 1897, p. 3, n. 4) corrects the nomen to Pulpidius and this correction has been adopted by Van der Weerd, Trois Legiones romaines du Bas-Danube, p. 225. The reading of CIL is accepted here. The man whose name is under discussion was a centurion of the XI Claudia in Dalmatia and his period of service falls between the year 42 and the principate of Vespasian.

The other first century use of Ulpius appears more certain. M. Ulpius Dasius the son of Marcus of the tribe Quirina from Sirmium is the name of an optio of the XV Apollinaris at Carnuntum perhaps before its departure for the East in the year 63, certainly during the first century. A papyrus in Egypt (Wessely, Schriftafeln 8) contains the names of soldiers in the III Cyrenaica before the year 108 and Ulpius is recorded three times. The majority of the dated cases of Ulpius belong to the third century; comparatively few examples of its use are definitely dated in the second century. This nomen is not often found at Lambaesis and the majority of the instances there are in the names of centurions.

THE ALPHABETICAL LIST

The following list of soldiers and under-officers of the legions is arranged alphabetically according to cognomina. The name including tribe and domus (when given) is printed in bold face type. All letters restored are enclosed in parentheses. Whenever the cognomen is complete on the stone it is not repeated here, but it is indicated by the first letter. This letter always a capital letter is not followed by a period. So in reading a name in which the cognomen is not spelled in full, the cognomen is to be supplied after the first capital letter not followed by a period which is the same as the first letter of the cognomen under which it occurs.

In addition to the name the following items are added in this order: (1), rank and legion, these are regularly indicated by the same abbreviations; the exact letters of the stone are disregarded in the attempt to secure uniformity. E. g. Min is regularly the abbreviation for Minervia, when the stone has only "M," (2), Date, wherever possible. "Date?" means that no definite date can be assigned to the inscription. (3), Place where the stone is found. Except for certain well-known places the Latin form of the name has been retained. (4), Place where the inscription or papyrus is published. Volumes of the CIL are cited by Roman numerals. For other publications vid. Table of Abbreviations.

The first cognomen in this list is Acceptus. The first name is that of Baebius Acceptus. The nomen appears on the stone in the form Bebius. The man was a soldier (miles) in the II Italica pia fidelis. The inscription is assigned to the third century (3s). The stone was found at Virunum in the province of Noricum. Lastly, the inscription is published in CIL III, no. 4837. Another example may be taken under the cognomen Adiutor. The third name is that of M. Iulius Adiutor, the son of Marcus, whose home is Apta of the tribe Voltinia. This man was a soldier in the XXII Primigenia at Mainz, where the stone was found. The inscription is not definitely dated and is published in the L'Année Epigraphique for 1910, no. 62.

Different spellings of the same cognomen are kept separate in the list, e. g., Alexander and Alexsander, Clemens and Clemes, Bassus and Basus, and so on. This separation seemed necessary to insure accuracy and to increase the usefulness of the list as a reference list for cognomina.

Through an oversight the following names were omitted both from the Alphabetical List and from the sections devoted to the Classification of Cognomina: T. Statius P. f. Serg. Marrax p p XIII Gem Date? Aquileia Pais Suppl n1163 and Cn. Acilius Relatus mil leg VIII missicius 1s Aquileia Pais Suppl n1160. The cognomen Marrax is perhaps to be explained as a formation from the noun marra, similar to pugnax from pugna, minax from mina, etc. For the etymology of marra vid Walde, Lateinesches etymologisches Wörterbuch; it is also to be found in Holder, altcelt Sprachsch., s. v. The cognomen Relatus may be classified as a participial adjective or as a noun. In view of the probable early date of the inscription we may interpret the name as an adjective used as a cognomen. For other participials so used, vid Chapter II, Participial Adjectives. For cognomina ending in -x, vid. this heading in Chapter II.
